"MY PEDIGREE"

A BOOK TO FACILITATE RE-CORDING FAMILY HISTORY in a CONCISE & ORDERLY FASHION

BRIEFLY described, it may be said that the book is designed to contain detailed particulars for six generations back from "myself" to "my great-great-great grand-parents," both on the father's and on the mother's side, covering a period of probably 150 to 200 years.

Space is provided for recording further particulars when a line of descent can be authenticated further back than six generations.

The book measures 8 by 6½ inches, and is printed on azure laid tub-sized ledger paper, strongly bound in buckram cloth with bevelled edge.

Price 4s. net, post free 4s. 4d.

MARCH, 1913.

EDITORIAL

THE chief object of a genealogical magazine should be to collect and print notes likely to prove of service to those engaged in genealogical research. Much useful work of this nature is being undertaken already by several excellent quarterly magazines in Great Britain, and in that work, so far as it serves the purposes of fostering interest in genealogy and garnering notes for its compilation, THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST wishes to be associated.

However, this magazine has further special objects in view, and it is to these that we would now draw the reader's kind attention.

In the first place we aim at completeness. It is true that no pedigree can ever be regarded as complete, but the material supplied for genealogical purposes from any particular class of record should certainly be complete. "Selections" from records are the bête noire of the modern working genealogist. The heresy of the last generation which wasted time in printing selections from parish registers and other records is now fortunately realized, for to-day is the collector's period, when no tittle of evidence is left unmentioned or unregarded. Therefore our subscribers may rest assured that any compilation issued as a part of THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST will be complete in so far as it sets out to deal with some particular class of record for a definite period or series.

Our next special object is to supply such compilations as separate works—volumes with their own pagination and indexes—capable of being bound independently of the magazine itself. The advantages of this method are almost too obvious to dwell on. Every working genealogist knows what a loss of time is entailed by wading through a long row of bound volumes of a genealogical periodical to find a reference to some particular individual living at a certain period. Perchance the searcher needs evidence of his ancestor's age. The result of hours spent in consulting the indexes of that row of volumes is probably some dozen references to others of the same surname but of other Christian names and of totally useless periods. With luck the desired reference may be found, but where? Probably in the middle of some work which has been continued in the pages of that magazine from part to part for years. Had that work been printed as a separate supplement, according to the method now adopted by THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST, it would have been bound up separately with its own index and would thus have found its way into the library catalogue and be easy both to remember and trace, whereas it is impossible for the most experienced genealogist to recall all the excellent works which have been buried in the pages of the genealogical magazines.

Our third special object is to avoid keeping compilations incomplete for years. A quarterly magazine requires three years to issue what we can issue in twelve months. Some of our supplements may run for two years before they are ready for the binders as separate works, but, if we appeared quarterly, they would still be incomplete at the end of six years. Further, the genealogist who inserts a query about any particular point has a chance of receiving his reply within a month instead of having to wait for another quarterly part. A genealogical publication cannot appear too frequently—in fact we regret that practical reasons prevent THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST being a weekly magazine. Personally, we find that at the end of three months we have forgotten what the last quarterly magazine contained.

Such being our objects, we now place before you our first monthly part, and would ask you to regard us as labourers on your behalf. THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST is but the hod which brings you a monthly instalment of sound, reliable material for your building operations. It is for us to choose the bricks which we think may be of service to you in building up or adorning your edifice. Many of these you will undoubtedly cast aside as useless in your particular work, but, if only some of the material we supply aids you in adding brick to brick and story to story, ours will be the pleasure of having helped you. No matter whether you are tracing the history of a family, an individual, a parish or a county we hope to bring some of the material you desire and in such a form that it may be ready to your hand to use.

We offer you a minimum of twenty-four pages each month. You will notice that the first eight of these form the magazine itself. If desired, they can be detached from the remainder and bound up separately. The following pages, to the number of at least sixteen,* are the "supplements" to this magazine, and consist of four or more four-page units of complete genealogical works. These units or sections are intended to be detached from the magazine and bound up separately as each work is complete. Full instructions for this binding will be issued in due course. There will be at least four supplements each month, and these will not always be the same, as some of our contributors will write only every other month. Sometimes more than four supplements will be included in the month, e.g. a genealogist who wishes to have his notes on any special family printed will, by arrangement, be able to have these inserted as an additional supplement appearing monthly or less frequently as it may suit him.

Our thanks are due to those who have placed their services at our disposal, offering to devote their time to the compilation of such works as we had scheduled as "desirable." For instance, the following supplements have been promised already:

Mr F. S. SNELL is working through the series of Chancery Depositions for the period known as "Before 1714," and from each document he is abstracting the names of all the parties to the suit, the matter in dispute, a complete list of the witnesses, together with their ages, residences and occupations—where these are given. The official calendars state that Depositions exist in connection with a suit "BROWN v. SMITH," giving merely the surnames of the first plaintiff and first defendant without any further information. All the rest of this invaluable material for pedigree-building is thus buried, and yet every one of these numerous documents teems with clues. The following happens to be a very good example of the data supplied even at a date much earlier than that on which Mr SNELL is working:

* This month there are twenty such pages, viz., the first four pages of five supplements.

Deposition dated 16 Nov. 38 Hen. VIII (1546). The witnesses include "William INGERAM, of the age of lx, now dwelling in Pilton, Devonshire, where he hath dwelled ij yeres past, and afore in the parish of Kingsbrompton (Somerset) xl yeres, and was borne in the parish of Kings Brompton, parcel of the Manor of Bury."

The genealogist is thus supplied with authentic information about the birthplace of a native of Kings Brompton, 204 years before the local church registers commence.

Mr Ernest F. KIRK has undertaken the arduous task of making full abstracts of the Feet of Fines (series entitled "Divers Counties") for the reign of Henry VIII.

Mr A. J. C. GUIMARAENS is also working on a highly interesting and valuable source of information. The Protestation Oath Rolls of 1641/2 preserved among the archives of the House of Lords, contain lists of all males over the age of 18, arranged under counties. The custodian of these records has most kindly permitted Mr GUIMARAENS to transcribe these rolls for Middlesex for this magazine. In some cases they supply us with actual signatures. For Americans especially this is a valuable period, as it should give many clues to the parishes in which their emigrant ancestors were born.

The Rev. J. L. E. HOOPPELL has undertaken a work which many have desired but none has previously had the courage to tackle. His series of articles, entitled "The Victims of the Plague of 1665," will, by giving extracts relating to deaths from plague in towns and villages all over England, provide many clues as to the migration of families at that period. It is a matter of history that many thousands fled from London only to die from this dire scourge, the germs of which they had taken into the country towns and villages with them. Many a gap in a pedigree will be completed as a result of bringing these interesting references together. How seldom one sees a note on a pedigree "died of the plague, 1665." The reason for this is that the genealogist naturally does not know in what remote country village to look for the burial entry of his ancestor.

If we may be permitted to do so, we should like to add a few words about our own contributions. The Monumental Inscriptions of Bromley, Kent, include references to many interesting individuals. For instance, many of the wealthy London merchants lived, died and were buried there. Our other contribution, "Chancery Proceedings relating to the Family of DESBOROUGH," will, perhaps, be of wider scope than its title would indicate. All those who have any experience of Chancery Proceedings know that a suit may touch many who are not interested in either the plaintiff or the defendant. A lawsuit between a DESBOROUGH and a SMITH may give several generations of a pedigree of BROWN, whose property is in dispute. Those without experience of Chancery records who wonder what use they may be are recommended to study the pedigree given on page 8 of the present magazine. It shows in tabular form what may sometimes be obtained through the perusal of but two documents—A Bill in Chancery and its Answer.

As to our first eight pages every month—these will give us room for the expression of an opinion on matters genealogical, and still enable us to include interesting genealogical notes, extracts, pedigrees, fly-leaf inscriptions, queries, reviews of books, short articles complete in themselves, etc. We ask our readers' assistance in filling these pages with matter which may be of interest to all. "Queries" should be short and the name and address of the inquirer must be added, so that correspondents may send replies to him direct.

We would draw special attention to Mrs NEVILL JACKSON's most interesting article on the fine collection of EDOUARD's Silhouettes in her possession, and we feel sure that many will gratefully avail themselves of her kind offer to them to consult her indexes for any name in which they may be interested.

THE EDITOR.

RECENT DISCOVERY OF NINE THOUSAND NAMED & DATED SILHOUETTE PORTRAITS

By Mrs F. NEVILL JACKSON,

Author of "A HISTORY OF SILHOUETTES."

THOSE interested in family history undoubtedly value authenticity in evidence, above everything. It is for this reason that the recent discovery of about nine thousand four hundred named and dated silhouette portraits by August EDOUARD (1789-1861), silhouettist to the Royal family of France, is an event of first importance to all those interested in research, for there is no flaw in the chain of evidence with regard to his work in connection with each individual sitter.

Not only did this painstaking and methodical artist write on every portrait the full name of his sitter, date when taken, home address and place where taken, but he frequently added newspaper cuttings from contemporary news-sheets, of marriage, death or accident and relationship with distant members of the family, whose portraits are also to be found in the volumes containing his work.

The late Andrew TUER wrote of this marvellous collection, commenting on the prodigious industry of the artist and the value of the folios for genealogical research, should they ever come to light. Though in 1895 EDOUARD's Treatise on Silhouettes (published 1835) was read by the author of this article, and the quest of this large mass of pictorial documentary evidence became definite in her mind, it was not till 1911 that this pageant of lifelike portraiture became hers by purchase.

In his Treatise the artist describes how he keeps "a note of the names of the persons I take and the date. These are written five times over—first, on the duplicate of the likeness" (he always cut out of doubled paper so that there were two original portraits, one for the purchaser and one for reference); "secondly in my day-book, thirdly in my book in which I preserve them, fourthly in the index-book, and fifthly in the general index. Without this arrangement how could I, at a minute's notice, tell whether I had taken the likeness of any person inquired for, and could it be otherwise possible to produce the silhouette or to know from about fifty books, folio size, and above 50,000 likenesses, if I had taken the one required."

Augustin Amant Constance Fidèle EDOUARD came to England as a political refugee in 1825. His estate was much impoverished and he began to cut silhouette portraits professionally, having accidentally discovered that he had great facility in catching a likeness.

Itinerating in England, Scotland and Ireland he took up his residence in each town, and, using his reference folios for exhibition purposes, he took the portraits of those who flocked to his rooms. He also went to the country houses of the nobility and gentry, so that there must have been few families of note whose names are not included in his list, while the humblest had access to his studio to obtain this cheap and popular form of portrait.

From contemporary news-sheets, in which his work was much commented upon, we find that in 1829 he was at work in Cheltenham, in 1830 at Edinburgh, where The Evening Courant describes the portrait of Sir Walter Scott, recently purchased by the nation and considered by connoisseurs to be the most human of all his portraits. It hangs in the National Portrait Gallery amongst "recent acquisitions."

The artist was in Glasgow in 1831, after having attended by command at Holyrood Palace and taken the portraits of Charles X. of France, then in exile, the Dauphin and Dauphine, their children, and every member of the court to the number of seventy-eight. This includes the equeuries, Cardinal LATIL, the confessor of the King, and others of extraordinary interest, a list too long to name, but which, perhaps, may appear in full in a later issue.

Dublin newspapers, The Cork Evening Herald, and many others, give ample corroboration of the silhouettist's movements in Ireland and elsewhere, which are shown in the dated portraits, and recorded in his Treatise.

EDOUART landed in New York in 1839, and seems to have met with immediate success. His pictorial record of American citizens, their wives and families, 1839 to 1844, probably forms an authentic social picture gallery, such as no other nation possesses. To the number of over 3,000, there are cabinet ministers, statesmen (including seven Presidents), senators, members of the army and navy in full uniform, correct to a strap and button, journalists, men of letters, actors, financiers—August BELMONT, OGDENS, POSTS, MORGANS, APPLETONS, Presidents of banks with their wives and children, each named and dated. A fine full length portrait of John TYLER was taken at the White House by EDOUART in 1841, and it gave the writer much pleasure to return it, through presentation, to Mr TAFT, so that, after seventy years of wandering and romantic adventure by land and sea, it now hangs on the walls of the official residence of America's presidents.

1841 was the time of the Log Cabin Election, and HARRISON, the hero of it, is shown by the artist with two autographs, for his sitters frequently signed EDOUART's books. Seven hundred and sixty-five portraits were taken at Washington and elsewhere in this year. In the following, Cambridge was visited, and LONGFELLOW, members of the QUINCEY family and the President of Harvard, are amongst hundreds of interesting portraits. Philadelphia, Saratoga Springs, New Orleans, Charlestown, and dozens of other towns appear on the portraits of men and women of that day.

EDOUART stayed in America for ten years, but only till 1844 is his work shown in the reference folios. The reason is interesting and sadly dramatic. In December, 1849, the artist sailed for France in the ship "Oneida," which was laden with bales of cotton from Maryland, and took twenty-five passengers. After a stormy passage she was wrecked off the coast of Guernsey in Vazon Bay, December 21. The passengers were saved and part of the baggage, amongst it cases containing fourteen of the precious reference folios, some old letters and list books; all the rest were lost, and, according to contemporary letters, the ship broke up four days after she had gone on the rocks.

EDOUART, suffering much from shock and exposure, was hospitably entertained by the LUKIS family, resident in Guernsey. He presented his collection to Frederica LUKIS before he left for Guines, where he died in his seventy-third year. It was from the son of Frederica LUKIS that the collection was purchased.

Each portrait measures eight to nine inches and is full length. EDUART considered the head alone insufficient to show the personality of a sitter. There are about fifty of the bust only, a dozen are posthumous, being taken from a picture or statue, whilst sometimes the artist was summoned to a death chamber to portray the features of some man or women of whom there was no other record.

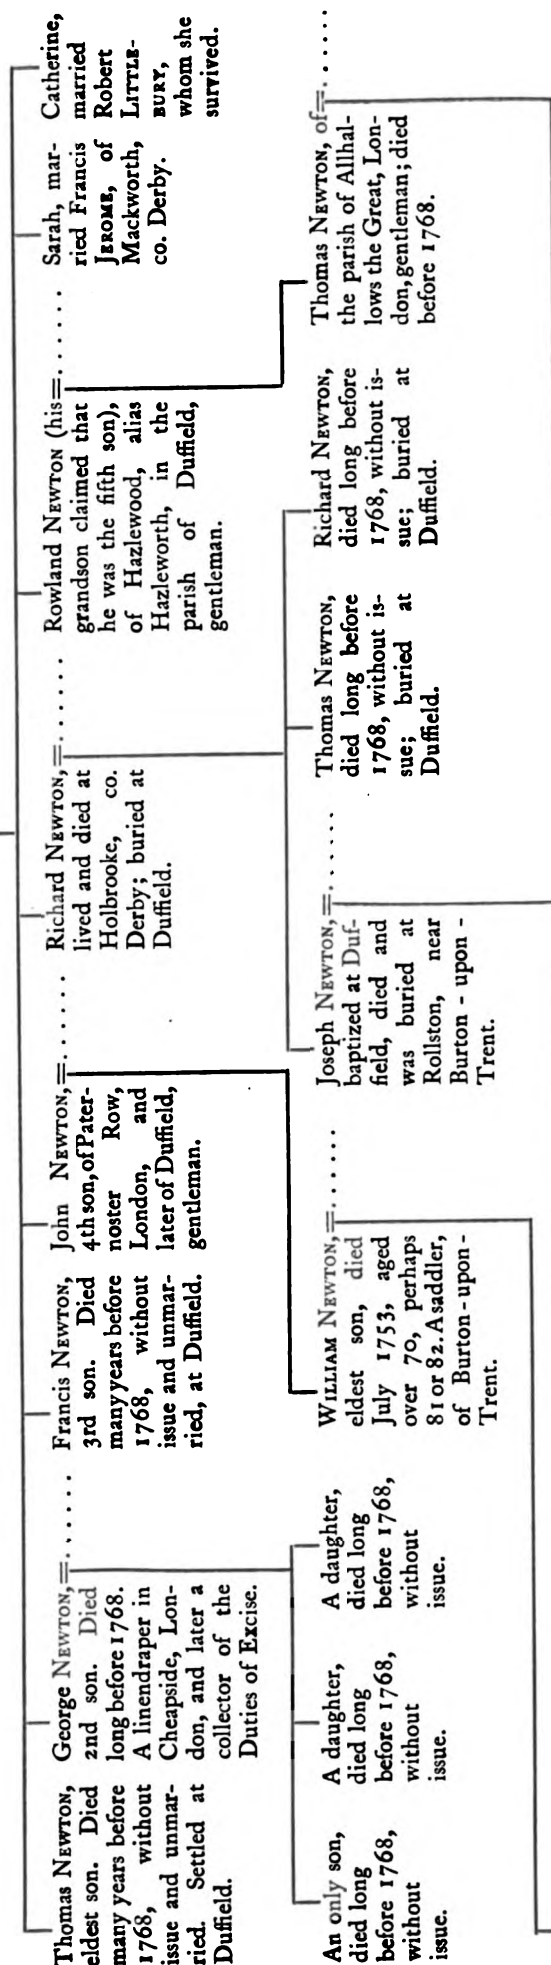

The illustration, which forms the frontispiece, is a full-sized reproduction of one of the collection, chosen because it is of no celebrated character but one amongst the many thousands of men, women and children of whom probably there is no other pictorial record, and therefore of immense personal value to the descendants. Connoisseurs will appreciate the fineness of technique and the virile methods of the artist. Who knows but that some ancestors in our own family may not look out of this great shadow pageant in startling reality, showing us a feature, a pose of head or shoulder, a trick or gesture, which we have ourselves inherited, or which is familiar to us in our children.

With the portrait of Mr Solomon SHELDON is also one of his wife. She is a very comely lady, dressed in the full skirts of the period, with puffed sleeves and beribboned headdress; she holds an eyeglass and faces her husband.

[After reading Mrs Nevill Jackson's most interesting contribution, we feel sure that our readers will desire further information respecting this unique collection. We find on inquiry that alphabetical indexes of it have been made, classified according to the nationality of the sitters, and that particulars can be given with regard to the full names of those whose portraits are represented amongst the 9,400 mentioned, together with dates, addresses, etc. Letters may be addressed to the care of the Publisher of THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST, but a stamped and addressed envelope should be enclosed for reply.—THE EDITOR].

BATTLE OF LA HOGUE A.D. 1692

EXTRACT FROM THE PARISH REGISTERS OF NORTHWOOD, ISLE OF WIGHT.

By S. ANDREWS, L.R.C.P. Lond., etc.

THE interesting account given below, which does not appear to have been previously published, refers to the battle of La Hogue between the combined English and Dutch fleets against the French fleet off the Isle of Wight and the French coast, commencing on the 19th and lasting until the 25th May 1692. The account was found in and extracted from the Parish Registers of Northwood, I.W., and is now printed by the kind permission of the Rev. Wm. Jas. STOBART, vicar of Carisbrook, with which Northwood is combined.

In the same year that the battle took place two pamphlets were published which refer especially to it; one was printed by the authority of the Admiralty, and the other privately for one John RAWLINS, being entitled "An Account of the late Great Victory &c." This latter includes a letter from an officer to a friend in London, which strongly resembles the character and style of the Northwood narrative. The former mentions the suggested disloyalty of the Naval Officers, and gives a copy of a letter from Queen Mary calling upon them to support the Crown, which drew from them a loyal answer. It goes on to tell of the hurried assembly of the Fleet, the waiting at Rye for the Dutch, and the uniting of the squadrons at St Helens (Spithead), following which is a general review of the whole engagement, and finally the Admiral's report dated 2 June 1692.

The entry in the Northwood Register appears to be in the handwriting of Rev. John SCOTT, Vicar of Carisbrook, and Rector of Northwood between 1690 and 1722.

In 1699, the volume in which this is written was rebound, when the edges of the book and the narrative were together trimmed up by the binder, showing that it was written before that date.

The Narrative appears to have been a copy of a private letter written early by an educated man on the Red Squadron, as his description of details is so full, and yet he omits any reference to the death of Rear-Admiral Carter of the Blue Squadron. He concludes with unofficial remarks to explain the results of the action; the wording of which indicates him to have been an Islander. The facts that Clowes's list of ships engaged in the action names the fireship "Stromboli," as commanded by Captain

Thomas Urry; and "Urry" being a distinctive Isle of Wight name; and that one family of this name actually resided at Northwood and others at Newport and Carisbrook at the same period; seem to give sufficient grounds for conjecturing that he was the author of this letter, which was sent home to his family, and seen and copied by the Rector.

Church Register "B" 1653 to 1737.

A Narrative of the engagement between the English & Dutch Fleets on the one hand, & the French on the other. May 19 1692. 16 Leagues to the S.W. of the Isle of White.

On Thursday the 19th of May 1692, Our Fleet consisting of 90 Capitall Ships, 60 English & 30 Dutch, were to the S. & S.W. of the Isle of W. making to the westward, when about 4 o'clock in the morning they espied a Fleet to the Windward, the Wind then Westerly blowing a handsome gale. At 5 we discovered them to be the French, consisting of about 50 Capitall Ships, the body of them bore of ours W. & W. by N. distance about 2 leagues. Which the English Admirall perciving, putt out his signall for our fleet to draw into a line of battle, which accordingly they did, & with cheerfulness prepared to engage them, staving down their cabins, making a clear ship, & repairing each man to his respective quarters, minutely expecting the approach of the enemy; who then bore down directly before the wind upon us, in good order & with much seeming courage. But the wind at that instant abating, the English of the Blew Squadron by towing ahead with their boats endeavoured to keep each his Stacon, & to come up with the Admirall or Red Squadron, which twixt 11 and 12 o'clock began to engage very hottly. The Blew Squadron could not come up, but having the French Admirall & Vice-Admirall of the Blew with 3 others on their Weather Bough, Sr John Ashby, Admirall of the Blew, with the rest of his Squadron gave chase to & endeavoured to cutt them off, butt they springing their luffe & making all the Sale they could to the Southwards with boats ahead Sr John could not come up with them, by reason of a thick fog arising, which continued from 6 in the evening till it was past 7, butt it then clearing up, & a small gale at ESE. arising, our Blew gave over the chase, tackt, & stood to the northward to the assistance of our Red Squadron, which had all the day been hottly engaged. A little after 7 the Blew gott in & till past 9 disputed the case as smartly as the Red had done before. It then growing late and being very foggy ours could perceive the French to run, to whom they gave chase, & about 10 at night discovered 5 sail of them to be on fire. May 20th, On Friday the 20th it proving very hazy, the Blew came to an anchor about 5 in the morning, but at halfe an hour after 6 weighed and stood away N.N. by W. NNW by N. & about 8 discovered our Admirall with the Dutch a head giving chase to the French who stood away from their own shore. At 6 in the evening not being able to stem the tide our Blew came to an anchor off Cape de la hogue 5 Leagues WSW. the French about 3 Leagues to the windward of us making for the race betwixt Alderney Isle and their own shore, the wind then at W.

21. At 6 on Saturday the French all gott into the race, & there came to anchor, & the English also, the current being too strong for them, Cape de la Hogue then bearing S. by E. & the Isle of Alderney SW. by S. At 7 in the morning the part of the French to the number of 17 sail by the strength was drove out of the race, to the Leeward of our Fleet, so that at 9 the Admirall made the signall for cutting, which most of the English did and gave chase to the above-mention'd ships 3 of which ran ashore at Cherburgh, where S^r Ralphe Delavall Vice-Admirall of the Red in the Sovereigne with about 10 sail more of 3rd and 4th rate frigates & 6 frigates fireships was left to burn them, the other still chasing the remainder of the French who steered away SE. with all the sail they could butt some of the English having gott to the Leeward of them, the French were forced to turn to windward into Caen Bay, & the English after them, but the tide being against and the wind at W by S. Wee came to an anchor at 12 at night.

22. At 4 on Sunday morning the English weighed, seeing the French ships under the shore in La Hogue road & one a ground. At . . Wee tacked & stood to the Northward, the wind at N by E. At 8 the Isle of St Mark was distance 2 miles. At 9 the English anchored in Caen Bay, Cape Barfleur bearing NW by N. distance 3 or 4 leagues, At 12 wee weighed and stood in to view the French ships who had loured and unriggered their top-masts making shores of their yards to keep their ships right at low water the better to fire at us. At 5 in the afternoon the Admirall sent orders for all the greatships to bear away, & to anchor near him which they did, and soon after he ordered all the long boats, barges or pinnaces well manned and armed to attend upon S^r Cloudesley Shovell then in the Kent, which accordingly they did.

23. A 6 on Monday morning, S^r Cloudesley weighed with severall third & fourth rate ships, & fire ships, in order to go into La Hogue harbour to burn the French, but it proving little wind they could not stem the tide & so were forced to anchor again. This morning came the welcome news of S^r Ralphe Delavall's having burnt 3 French Capitall ships at Cherbourg, viz. the Royall sun of 106 guns, commanded by Tourville the French Admirall, the Admirable of 100, & the Cobquerant of 80 guns. this Expedition was performed with the loss of only 1 Fireship. At 1 in the afternoon S^r John Ashby & the Dutch who had been to the Westward to intercept the French ships who had run into Alderney Race not having been able to effect it returned to the fleet. At 3 Adm. Russell made a signal for all the long boats, barges and pinnaces to come on board him, whom he order'd well armed & manned to attend on Vice-Admirall Rook then in the Eagle, S^r Cloudesley having left of the enterprise by reason of a violent feavour which suddenly had attacked him, at 8 in the evening V. Adm. Rook weighed, with several third & fourth rates & fire ships & stood in to La Hogue harbour.

Soon after the French from their platforms & ships began to fire, however our boats went in very courageously, notwithstanding all the oposicon to the contrary & before 9 sett 6 ships on fire, 4 of which were 3 deckt, carrying each 100 brass guns & the other 2 decks & a halfe of 80 Guns each.

24. On Tuesday morning very early Vice-Admirall Rook stood in again & employed our boats to burn the rest of the French & accordingly they burnt 23 decks more, 4 from 60 to 80 guns & one ship of 56 Guns was over-sett & utterly lost with all her men. They burnt also 19 Transport ships & brought off severall small craft. The French & Irish army on shore under the command of the late K^s James fired very thick upon our boats but thanks bee to God did little Exequution upon us.

25. On the 25th Adm. Russell sett sail from La Hogue with the fleet & on the 26th anchored at St Helens.

This great Victory was obtained without the loss of one English man of war, the French lost 22, most 3 Decks. Nor could the French plead that they were outdone by numbers, they being only 50 men of war, for our Red Squadron bore the brunt of the whole battle, the Blew & Dutch being becalmed as that they could not come in-till the fight was just ended & indeed had not above 50 40 (sic) ships engaged.

The design of the French was to have surprised our Fleet in Squadrons before their joyning & before the Dutch were come, & had they prevailed they had an army of 20000 men at La Hogue in Normandy ready to have come over & invaded this kingdom, & from very good hands I was informed their first attempt was to be upon Portsmouth, in order to which they were to have landed the greatest part of their men in Portsmouth Island, to block up the town and prevent succurs by land & the rest were to have landed upon this Island to secure their provisions & a retreat. But it pleas'd God that though the French Fleet were gott up as far as Torbay wiythin 24 hours sail, of S^r Ralph Delavalls & Rere-Admirall Carters squadrons which then lay at St Helens, to putt a stop to them there by sending a strong Easterly wind which not only kept them back, but also brought the Dutch from Holland & gave opportunity to our whole fleet to join & to be ready for them. By which means their design upon England was not only frustraeted, but their fleet was beaten & dispersed & they Lost 22 of their best men of warre.

COCKINGTON CHURCH

UNIQUE FONT AND FLOORSLAB

By ARTHUR J. JEWERS

ABOUT two miles and a half from Torquay, nestled in a wooded vale, lies the charming village of Cockington. The church, which is close to Cockington Court, consists of a nave and chancel with north and south aisles, each having a small chapel at the east end, but it is not the church generally but two objects offering points of special interest to the Antiquary that we propose to give an account of—the font and a floorslab.

Many fonts will be found with arms carved on them, but this one probably stands alone, showing as it does by such a series of shields, as is here described, the donor's descent; while the floorslab is doubtless quite unique in having the arms blazoned as well as carved.

The font is octagonal, and on each face is cut an impaled shield showing matches of the CARY family, who held Cockington from about 1350 until 1650. These we will take in what is probably their correct order.

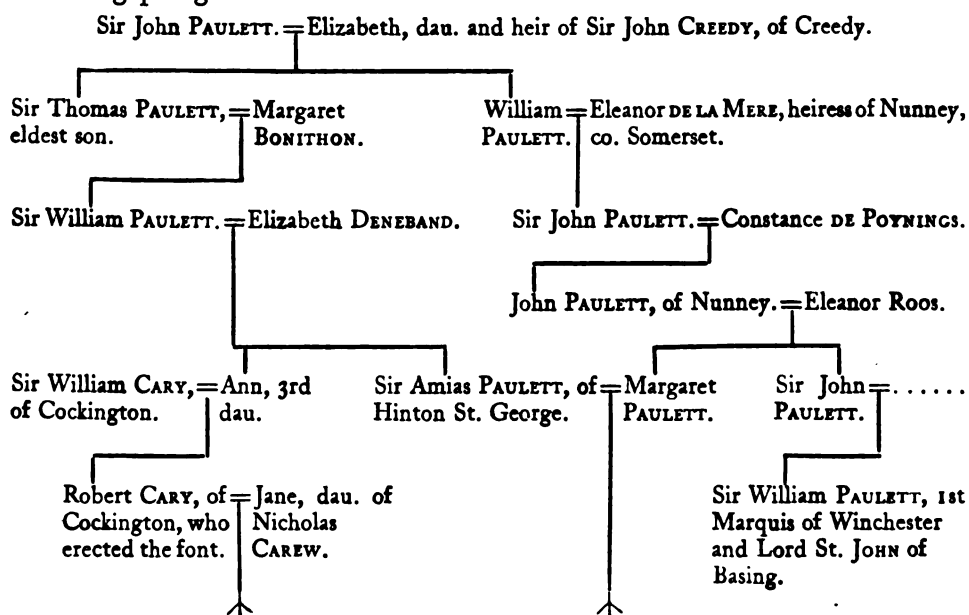

I. (Arg) on a bend (sa) three roses (of the first) CARY. Imp. (Sa) three swords in pile (arg hilts and pommels or) PAULETT. This is for Sir William CARY born 12 Aug. 1437, and beheaded after the battle of Tewkesbury May 1471 for being in arms with the army of Margaret of Anjou, consort of King Henry VI and her son. Sir William married on 14 July 1464 Anne, daughter of Sir William PAULETT of Hinton St George in Somersetshire; by this lady he had a son Robert of whom more hereafter.

II. CARY as before impaling, . . . on a chev. . . three pears pendant. . . The only reasonable explanation of this shield is that it represents the father of the above Sir William CARY, namely Philip CARY who married Christiana, daughter and heiress of William ORCHARD of Orchard; if this is the case the shield has a particular interest of its own, for the coat of this family of ORCHARD is generally given as azure a chevron arg. between three pears pendant or. It is thus given on an early seventeenth century parchment pedigree of the family and in other manuscripts from that period onwards: yet from the evidence of this shield dating back into the fifteenth century, there can be little doubt that the ORCHARDS, whose heiress married CARY bore the pears on the chevron and not as represented by later heralds with the chevron between the pears. This is only one of the many unrecorded coats of which an occasional example comes to light not to be found in any heraldic book, or the Heralds' College itself.

III. PAULETT as before impaling (az.) on a chief (arg) a demi lion ramp. (gu.). DENEHAND. In the carving the chief is so large as to make the shield per fess, but a chief is correct. This represents Sir William PAULETT of Hinton St George who married Margaret daughter and heir of John DENEHAND Esq. of Hinton St George, by which marriage that fine estate came to the Earls POULETT. By Margaret DENEHAND Sir William had issue two sons and four daughters, one of the latter, Anne, was the wife of Sir William CARY as mentioned under shield one.

IV. This shield is charged with, . . . two chevronels . . . enclosing three escallop shells . . .; impaling, . . . a pale wavy. . . . It is the only shield about which there is any difficulty in satisfactorily assigning its place; it very probably belonged to the grandparents of Christiana ORCHARD on her mother's side; the arms are, Arg. two chevronels sa. enclosing three escallop shells vert. ASHFORD of . . . in Devon; impaling, Arg. a pale wavy sa.—BOTON, query Sir Henry BOTON who wore these arms.

V. PAULETT impaling, (Arg.) on a chief (gu.) two mullets (or.). ST JOHN. This shield is a very interesting example of early marshalling before modern rules were adopted; it does not indicate a marriage, but is the representation of a dignity which merged in the PAULET family through its marriage with Constance daughter and heiress of Hugh de POYNINGS son and heir of Thomas de POYNINGS, Lord St JOHN of Basing, by which marriage the Barony of St JOHN and the estate of Basing, still possessed by the Marquis of Winchester, came to the PAULETT family. It will be observed that the arms of POYNINGS are omitted entirely; the shield itself seems somewhat out of place as CARY's wife was not descended from the match with POYNINGS although the wife of her brother Sir Amias PAULETT was a granddaughter of Constance de POYNINGS; the relationship is best shown by the following pedigree:

VI. (Gu.) four fusils conjoined in fess (erm.). DYNHAM impaling (Gu.) three arches, that in base double (arg. bases and capitals or.). DE ARCHES. John, Lord DYNHAM married Joan daughter and heiress of Richard de ARCHES by whom he had a son and four daughters, co-heirs to their brother; of these Margaret married Sir Nicholas CAREW. As carved on the font these arches are not easily recognized as they are all joined together and the tops form sharp angles.

VII. (Or.) three lions pass. (Sa. armed gu.) in pale. CAREW impaling DYNHAM. This shield represents the above marriage of Sir Nicholas CAREW and Margaret DYNHAM. The lions are carved on the font as passant to the sinister which is incorrect, done apparently to make them face those in the next shield.

VIII. CARY, the roses on a bend as before, impaling the three lions of CAREW. This is the shield of Robert CARY of Cockington and Clovelly who married Jane CAREW, daughter of the above Sir Nicholas; it is of this lady that the story is told that on the day after her marriage on being asked if she liked the change in her life, she replied, that yesterday it was, Care you, but to-day it is Care I. This Robert who gave the font is credited with having erected the church; which hardly seems likely though he may have helped largely in its rebuilding; had it been entirely his work we do not think he would have left the rest of the church without a trace of heraldry in its structure when he placed such a series of shields on the font. Robert was probably of age in 1485, when he petitioned for the restitution of the estates forfeited by his father's attainder fourteen years before; the year of his birth we do not know, although his will states that his birth took place at Hinton St George. That the font was executed in the earlier part of his life is evident from it having the arms of his first wife only, for he married twice after the death of Jane CAREW, dying at a very advanced age 15 June 1540 and is buried at Clovelly.

The floorslab referred to above lies in the middle aisle; at the top is a shield with the arms, while the inscription, partly round the edge and partly in the centre, records that, "Here lyes buried John EASTLEY of Stantor, gent. who died 1 April 1720 aged 72 years, who was born 4 February 1648." Beneath this comes the description of the arms thus: "Quarterly one and four, Argent a lion rampant gu. on the shoulder a cinquefoil ermine. EASTLEY, two and three, Sa. three fleurs de lys argent. ARCAS. Yard EASTLEY of Paynton gent. died 25 Nov. 1789." It is the blazon of the arms being given, as well as a carving of them, that gives this stone its particular interest, this being the only instance of such, as far as memory serves, among many hundreds from which the writer has made notes from, the usual course being to have the arms carved or incised in outline only.

The above-mentioned GEORGE LE GEYT was baptized at St Saviour's, Jersey, on the 16th of May 1756, so was only 26 years old when he was Commander of the privateer "Union" in 1782. He died unmarried, and was buried at St Saviour's on the 21st of September 1794. His sister, Rachel, is the ancestress of the LE BOUTILLIER family of America. The original of the above document is in the possession of the writer, whose great grandmother, JANE BENEST, née LE GEYT, was niece of GEORGE LE GEYT.

Among the Domestic State Papers (Car. I., Vol. 130) is a Register of Warrants for issuing Letters-of-Marque, 1628 to 1637. Entries of Letters of Marque from 1624 to the end of the American War will be found amongst the Records of the High Court of Admiralty, those for 1777 to 1812 being amongst the Records of the Secretary's Department of the Admiralty (Sec. Miscellaneous, 318).

BURIAL ON THE NORTH SIDE OF THE CHURCHYARD

Various reasons have been assigned for the common prejudice against this position. The following is believed to be the correct view: In early times access to the Church was always by means of a South door. While going through the churchyard to this door it was usual to say a prayer for the repose of the soul of any relative whose grave was passed. Persons buried on the N. side would therefore be unlikely to be remembered and to be prayed for.

CHURCHYARD NOTES

M. I., Co. Kent. Readers of last month's BRITISH ARCHIVIST will have observed that at Bromley, co. Kent, it was not unusual for the M. I. to contain the names of surviving sons and daughters. This practice is found in many other parts of the county, and owes its origin to a system of land-tenure (still existing) peculiar to Kent. Under this system, called "Gavel-kind," land, on intestacy, descends not to the eldest son, exclusively, as in other parts of England, but to all the sons in equal shares. Hence the desirability of giving public notice of the names of all possible claimants.

COLONEL EDWARD BRIGGS.
AN EPISODE OF THE CIVIL WAR

By EDGAR F. BRIGGS.

IN his Poem of Rokeby (Canto VI) Sir Walter Scott depicts "a horse-man arm'd at headlong speed" as entering a church to seek vengeance on his enemy, and a footnote to the edition of this poem, published by Adam and Charles BLACK at Edinburgh in 1875, explains that this description was taken from a real achievement of Major Robert PHILIPSON, called "Robin the Devil" amongst the Oliverians, who bore considerable malice against one Colonel BRIGGS, a J.P. and an active commander of Cromwell, who had held the country in awe during the time of the Civil War.

Major PHILIPSON had been besieged by Col. BRIGGS on Curwens Island in the Lake of Windermere for some eight months till his brother Colonel PHILIPSON raised a party and relieved him. It was now the major's turn to make reprisals. He put himself therefore at the head of a little troop of horse and rode to Kendal. Here, being informed that Colonel BRIGGS was at prayers (for it was on a Sunday morning), he stationed his men properly in the avenues, and himself, armed, rode directly into the church. It is said he intended to seize the Colonel and carry him off; but as this seems to have been totally impracticable it is rather probable that his intention was to kill him on the spot, and in the midst of the confusion to escape. Whatever his intention was it was frustrated, for BRIGGS happened to be elsewhere. The congregation, as might be expected, was thrown into great confusion on seeing an armed man on horseback make his appearance among them; and the Major, taking advantage of their astonishment, turned his horse round and rode quietly out. But having given the alarm, he was presently assaulted as he left the assembly and, being seized, his girths were cut and he was unhorsed.

At this instant his party made a furious attack on the assailants, and the Major killed with his own hand the man who had seized him, clapped the saddle, ungirthed as it was, upon his horse and vaulting into it rode full speed through the streets of Kendal, calling his men to follow him and, with his whole party, made a safe retreat to his asylum in the lake.

In "Beauties of England (Westmorland)," p. 32, there is a similar description of the incident in which the person for whom Major PHILIPSON was searching is not named, but there is a footnote taken from BURN and NICHOLSON's "History of Westmorland" as follows: "Our author Mr. MACHEL who was a royalist, out of delicacy did not choose to name him as he was then living, but probably it was Colonel BRIGGS."

The church in which this act of sacrilege took place was the Parish Church of Kendal, in which hangs a sword and an ancient helmet, commonly called "the Rebel's cap," concerning which the above story is related and the narrative is still extant in a ballad of the times entitled "Dick and the Devil," now of course extremely rare [Transactions of the Cumberland and Westmorland Antiquarian and Archæological Society, Vol. XVI, p. 204].

In this account Robert PHILIPSON is recorded as making search in Kendal Church with the object of killing his cousin, Colonel Edward BRIGGS. With regard to the cousinship this must have been somewhat remote. Robert PHILIPSON's great great grandmother being Elizabeth daughter of Robert BRIGGS of Helsfell Hall [Visitation of Westmorland, 1615 and 1616]. Whether or no Colonel Edward BRIGGS was a descendant of this Robert BRIGGS who died in 1547 is not clear, but there is no doubt that he came of a Westmorland family residing in the parish of Helsington, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. of Kendal. His father was Arthur BRIGGS, of Helsington, who was alive in 1620, as appears by a Bill exhibited in the Star Chamber by the Lords against tenants (re tenant rights and riotous assembly at Staveley Chapel in the county of Westmorland) 2 January 1620, the proceedings being taken against Arthur BRIGGS and others for combining and making a common purse [NICHOLSON and BURN's History of Westmorland]. His mother's name was Anne, but whose daughter she was is not clear.

Edward BRIGGS was born in 1613, and in 1638-39 he married Mary FAWCETT, spinster, as appears from the following extract from William PAVER's Supplement to Consolidated Visitations of Yorkshire [Cod MS. 29650. Brit. M.]: "Edward BRIGGS gent 25. p. Kirby Malham mar. 1638-39 Mary FAWCETT spr 20. p. Arncliffe a Arncliffe." Mary FAWCETT was a daughter of Marmaduke FAWCETT of Arncliffe in the West Riding of Yorkshire. The Registers of Kendal show that Thomas BRIGGS of Kendal had two sons, Robert BRIGGS, bap. March 1559, and Arthur, bap. Sep. 1560, and in all probability this Thomas was Edward's grandfather.

Bridge House (a corruption of Briggs' House) at Helsington, where Edward BRIGGS may be presumed to have lived, was burnt down on Easter Eve 1906, and was in 1575 the residence of Robert BRIGGS, first recorder or steward of Kirkby Kendall (1575) by Charter of Queen Elizabeth.

In the house at its north end was a chapel, and therein a painted window with two lights, which was subsequently placed in the south end of the building. This was the only part that escaped destruction except that some one thrust a ladder through one of the lights. In the window are the initials, R B and A B, of Robert BRIGGS and Anne his wife, who was a SEDGWICK of Collin Field (a manor house about one mile from Kendal on the Milnthorpe Road) [see Notes on the Chapelry of Helsington by Rev. J. Whiteside. Transactions of Cumberland and Westmorland Antiquarian and Archæological Society, Vol. VIII, p. 115]. This Robert BRIGGS was probably an uncle of Edward BRIGGS.

On the 8th Oct. 1644 at Penrith Sir William ARMYNE, Richard BARWIS, and Robert FENWICK write to William LENTHALL sending the names of several gentlemen whom they thought fit to be Justices of the Peace naming (inter alia): In Westmorland, Colonel Edward BRIGGS, Esq., fit to be High Sheriff [MSS. of Duke of PORTLAND at Welbeck Abbey].

The Royalist Composition Papers show that on 13th Oct. 1648 Col. Edward BRIGGS one of the Committee, informs the Board y^e when he was prisoner at Carlisle he did see Capt. William POTTER in ye enemys quarter in y^e garrison there kept against the Parliament [Westmorland Note Book by J. WHITEWELL].

In 1649 Edward BRIGGS was Colonel of a company of Foot souldiers as is evidenced by the following Commission:

“By the Committee for ordering the warre within the Northern Association.”

“To Ensign Simon BOWNESS”

“By Authoritie given us by Ordnance of Parliament we doe hereby constitute and appoint you Ensigne of that Company of Foot souldiers whereof Colonell Edward BRIGGS is Colonell and Captain and to be raised in the Countie of Westmorland for defence of the Parliament and Kingdome according to the said ordnance &c &c.”

I ALURID

[Idem. Vol. IV, p. 353]

In 1656 Edward BRIGGS, Esq., was appointed one of the Commissioners for Westmorland for putting in execution an ordinance of Cromwell's parliament for levying an assessment of 60,000*l.* a month in nature of a Land Tax.

On the 30 May 1658 Edward BRIGGS of Helsington, Co. Westmorland, filed a Bill of Complaint in Chancery against Thomas BURTON for money lent [Chan. Pro. before 1714 Hamilton 50/107].

During the Commonwealth the fortunes of the Colonel seem to have been on the rise, but on the Restoration they must have fallen very considerably and troubles came thickly upon him, as appears from the following Chancery Proceedings.

On the 22 Nov. 1658 (the year of CROMWELL's death) Edward BRIGGS therein described as of Overborowe, County Lanc Esq. and others filed a Bill of Complaint against Thomas BURTON re moneys claimed by Defendant.

The Plea of Thomas BURTON the Defendant states that Edward BRIGGS was outlawed.

On 28 June 1653 in County of York by name of Edward BRIGGS of Helsington, Esq.

On 3 April 1654 in Citty of Yorke in name of Edward BRIGGS of Burrow Co Lanc Yeoman.

On 16 Oct 1654 in County of Yorke by name of Edward BRIGGS of Traimehouse(?) Malhamdale Co York Yeoman.

On 28 Oct 1654 in London by name of Edward BRIGGS of Overburrow Co Lanc Esq.

In his Bill of Complaint Edward BRIGGS pleads that he in 1644 being a Colonel in the service of the Parliament had orders for keeping of a garryson of soldiers within the Castle and Town of Appulby which he undertook. But the Towne of Appulby and country thereabouts being growne so poor by the outrageous plunderings of the Kings party he was constrained for the maintenance of the said Garrison to borrowe divers great somes of money & did borrow of one Richard BURTON £100 on Bond for £200. That he had repaid £190 but, on death of Richard, Thomas BURTON claimed £70 and obtained judgment against him. [Chan. Pro. before 1714. WHITTINGTON 54].

From a Chancery suit of KILLNER v. BRIGGS (Bill filed 7 June 1671) it appears that Edward BRIGGS of Burrow Co Lanc Esq. & Ann BRIGGS his mother were in 1653 seised of 2 messuages and lands held of the manor of Helsington Co Westmorland, that Ann was then dead and that Edward had a son Thomas to whom the property had been conveyed. [Chan. Pro. before 1714. WHITTINGTON 161.]

In 1682 Edward BRIGGS was sued by Maude widow of Marmaduke DRAKE whose sister Mary he had married, in respect of a sum of £200, and in his answer Edward BRIGGS states that soon after the death of the said Marmaduke FAWCETT about 1671, the said Marmaduke DRAKE wth one Thomas EDMONSON of ye Town of Lancaster came to him (the Defendant) to ye Castle of Lancaster where he was then close prisoner and brought severall great baggs of money along wth them and did their treat wth the Defendant about ye said £200 and would then a given him this Defendant a considerable sume of moneye to an agreement Provided he would then have delivered up his writings & given a release to ye said West close & black banke [at ov^r Hesleden Litton Co York] in hopes y^a ye sd baggs of moneye might have tempted this Defendant & drawne him to an agreem^t as this Deft supposeth, hee being then a prisoner & they knowing him to be greatly necessitated for moneye. He admits that he caused the Deft Joseph DRAKE the father to be arrested upon a speciall capias as his Attorney informed him for about £600 but after 3 dayes imprisonment he suffered said Joseph DRAKE ye father to goe at large and on consideration he thought y^a it was his best way to bring his bill in the Court ag^t the then Complainants [DRAKE v. BRIGGS Chan. Pro. before 1714 BRIDGES 473/54].

In 1688 Edward BRIGGS of Over Burrow Co. Lanc gent files his Bill of Complaint dated 29 Nov. 1688 against George REDHEAD the Bill reciting that in January 15 Chas. II the Compt in consideration of £100 mortgaged unto one George REDHEAD late of Over Burrow aforesaid yeom deceased all those closes and parcells of land in Over Burrow commonly called Goodred Croft, John Batty Croft, Adam Batty, Ellers ye Ells, Gooselands, Woodgraves, Seggs, New close & Moorlands and in 18th year of late Maj^{ty} reigne in consideration of £30 mortgaged to said George REDHEAD one messuage or mansion house called Nelson house wth a Barne & Stable there one close or parcell of ground called the bean garth one other close or parcell of ground called Landgraves & severall other parcells of land situate & being in Over Burrow. That George REDHEAD entered into said mortgaged premises and would not suffer orator to redeem same. That REDHEAD stirred up & prosecuted against orator several unjust & vexatious suites at law whereby he caused orator to be cast into prison at ye castle of Lancaster where he remained a prisoner during all ye time of ye continuance of the said suites and for some years after & claims delivery of Deeds relating to said property.

HEADSTONES, WHEN INTRODUCED

It is commonly said that upright headstones and outside altar tombs were not in use before c. 1670, though outside ledgers (or flat stones) may be some hundred years older. It is highly desirable that any one meeting with an early 17th century upright headstone or outside altar tomb should make a careful copy of the inscription and send it to the editor of THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST.

Jacobite Extracts from the Parish Registers of St. Germain-en-Laye. Edited by C. E. Lart. 2 vols. Royal 8vo. The St. Catherine Press. 21s. net each.

TO the student of the Jacobite period, and to Irish and Scottish genealogists, this work must prove of the greatest value. It gives the entries relating to those who gave up their homes for a lost cause, and became outcasts from their native land in order to follow the fortunes of their King and Queen in exile.

Apparently the Royal family showed a great interest in their Catholic adherents, while those Protestants and Quakers who became ruined in the Stuart cause were shown an equal lack of consideration. An example of this is the case of Lord DUNFERMLINE, a Protestant, who was buried secretly by his friends, so that his body should not be drawn through the streets on a hurdle, and thrown on the town midden. Another instance is that of Dr GORDON, a Scots Bishop, who abjured in order to save himself from starvation.

The Editor deserves the thanks of all historians and genealogists for the patience and care which he has bestowed on this work.

THE STORMING OF SERINGAPATAM, 1799

By COLONEL G. F. NEWPORT-TINLEY, C.B.

SERINGAPATAM, the stronghold of Tippoo Sultan and the capital of the Mysore State from 1610 to 1799, was taken by assault by the British in the latter year. Amongst the storming parties on the 4th May was one John TOMKYNs, an officer of the Bengal Artillery, who, in the sub-joined letter to his sister, describes the scene after the capture of the fortress, and the finding of Tippoo's body, which he himself saw.

From his Commission, a copy of which follows, it would seem that he had some 21 years' service at this time.

This Commission is of great interest, as bearing the signatures of Warren HASTINGS, and three of his Counsellors, all men of note; it is in manuscript, on paper—not parchment—and bears the seal of the "UNITED COMPANY OF MERCHANTS OF ENGLAND TRADING TO THE EAST." Together with the letter it should appeal to the Historian as well as to the Genealogist.

The originals of both documents are in the possession of the writer.

Camp Seringapatam June 1st. 1799

My dear Sister.

That Tipoo is killed, Seringapatam taken, with his whole Family & all his Treasure, the News-papers will fully inform you— We encamp'd here on the 5th of April, & had very hard Duty in the Trenches & Batterys untill the 4th. May when the breach was storm'd, & the Town taken, & Tipoo killed— I saw the Body of Tipoo, he was kill'd with every man round him; in what is called a Sallee Port, he lay under a heap of Dead Bodies they were obliged to remove about 100 before they cou'd get him out — Our lofs has been 60 or 70 Officers kill'd and wound'd & about 12 or 1400 Men— There has not been found as much Gold in the Treasury as was expect'd but Jewels enough to supply all Europe.

Tippo's Palace in the Fort was surround'd with a wall 60 Feet high, in it were two of his sons & about 700 Ladies with their attendants; well for them that the wall was so high for had our got men [sic] into it whilst the firing was continued, they would have sack'd the whole and play'd the Devil— I dont know how to direct to my Brother W or Mrs Wilkinson; or where they reside— Tell them poor Montagu lofs'd his left arm & died a few Days after—Before this Place was taken we had very little to eat & that very little was very bad mutton, but now the Country People bring in Plenty of Sheep & Fowles; and all seems to be Peace Quietnefs, no Liquor no Biscuits & many little wants besides to be purchased; & it will be some Time before such supplies can get here as it is about 300 miles from Madras. The Govr. General is at Madras & it is reported he is coming up here—My stay will not be long here; but where I shall be sent I know not, perhaps to Bengal.

My Love to my & Brothers Sisters [sic].

I am my D Sister

Yours affect'ly.

INHABITANTS OF WEST KENT

1487-8

BY HENRY R. PLOMER

THE difficulty of tracing a pedigree, beyond the date at which parish registers begin, is familiar to all who are engaged in genealogical work. In some counties, the difficulty is overcome by reference to the Subsidy Rolls, but these are invariably missing for the particular county desired by the searcher. Parish registers were not instituted until 1538, and are rarely found before 1600.

Consequently the following list of inhabitants of the western part of Kent who paid tithes to Sir John LECH, through the hands of John TUTTESHAM, his receiver, in the 3rd year of Henry 7 (i.e. 1487-8) should be useful.

The nearest subsidy roll to it is one for the Lathe of Aylesford in the 35 Hen. 8 (1543-4) and that is in a very bad state, the portion covering the places named below being most of it missing. Further, the returns made in it were assessments on goods; this is a list of those who paid tithes on land.

In his will proved on 10th December, 1523, Sir John LECH states that he bought this Kentish estate of Thomas BARHAM and John HOLDEN and Anne his wife. The hearing of the action for the recovery of these tithes occurs in Michaelmas term, 3 Hen. 8th.

FORGED EPITAPHS

CHAS. A. BERNAU, F.S.G.

IT is probable that every one who collects anything finds himself, sooner or later, the victim of the forger. When the forged specimen is a coin, stamp, picture, piece of china, autograph, or any other article which a collector is willing to buy, the forger's intention is obvious—he is earning his living. The collector of “curious inscriptions,” however, never buys additions to his collection, so one must presume that the forger of these does his work merely for the honour and glory of giving birth to an amusing lie. Generally his courage fails him, and he omits the name of the deceased and that of the church or churchyard where the inscription is supposed to have been found. Two such instances (taken from Comin' thro' the Rye, by Helen Mathers), are:

ON AN INFANT THREE MONTHS OLD.

“Since I am so quickly done for
I wonder what I was begun for?”

ERECTED BY A FATHER TO THE MEMORY OF HIS SON.

“Here lies the unworthy son of a worthy father.”

It is quite possible that these may be genuine inscriptions, but, without names and places, they are of no interest to the collector. One might as well offer a philatelist a postage stamp with its perforations cut off.

The same novel gives the three following examples which have now passed into almost general acceptance among non-collectors as genuine inscriptions; at least the writer of these lines imagines so, as he has had them quoted to him by many of his friends who honestly thought they really existed on stone somewhere.

“Poor Martha SNELL, her's gone away;
Her would if her could, but her couldn't stay;
Her'd two sore legs and a baddish cough,
But her legs it was as carried her off!”

“Here lies the body of Betsy BINN,
Who was so very pure within,
She bust this outer shell of sin,
And hatched herself a cherubim.”

“Poor Martha KITCHEN! her days were spent,
She kicked up her heels and away she went.”

The only reason for referring to these here is that they are quite typical of the second class of forged inscriptions, viz., that in which the forger becomes a trifle more daring, and gives the names of the deceased.

The third class comprises those where the author of the forgery gives not only the names of persons, but also the name of the county in which the inscription is to be found, carefully suppressing the parish. Of this class probably the following is an example:

"CURIOUS INSCRIPTION ON THE FRONT OF A CHURCH, AT A VILLAGE IN SHROPSHIRE."

This Church with ornaments it was supplied
And inside and outside was beautified
When Master John PARKS, who lived near,
Was our well-beloved Overseer.
The Commandments and Belief, it is right to declare,
Was given by Master Peter SINCLAIR;
And two new bells were put in the steeple
By a voluntary contribution of the Parish People."

Let us hope some Shropshire reader of the ARCHIVIST will be able to supply the name of the village.

The fourth class comprises those "epitaphs" (with or without the name of the deceased) supposed to exist in a named Church or Churchyard, and yet which, from their contents, appear to be forgeries. Here are four from the writer's collection. Will local readers in Sheffield, Wisbech, Yarrow and Grantham either confirm them or help to "nail them to the counter" as spurious?

EPITAPH ON A CUTLER IN ST PHILLIP'S CHURCH YARD, SHEFFIELD.

Here lies, alas, Poor Roger NORTON,
Whose sudden death was odly brought on;
Trying one day his corn to mow off,
The Razor slipt and cut his toe off,
The part, or rather what it grew to,
An inflammation quickly flew to
Which took at last to mortifying;
And poor old Roger took to dying.

IN WISBECH CHURCHYARD, CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

Here lies Elizabeth, the wife of Roger MARTIN,
And a good wife she was to Roger, that's sartin.

CURIOUS EPITAPH IN YARROW CHURCHYARD, CHESHIRE.

At Tyso they were born and bred,
And in the same good lives they led;
But being grown to man's estate,
It proved to them most fortunate;

THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST

Near sixty years of mortal life
 They was a happy man and wife;
 And being so by nature tied,
 When one fell sick, why—t'other dyed;
 So both together are laid in dust,
 To wait for the rising of the just.
 They had six children born and bred,
 And five before them being dead,
 Their only then surviving son
 Has caused this stone for to be done.

EPITAPH IN GRANTHAM CHURCHYARD.

John PALFRYMAN which lieth here,
 Was aged just twenty-four year:
 And near this place his mother lies,
 Also his father—when he dies!

ARMS OF THE MILITARY COMPANY OF LONDON

By ARTHUR J. JEWERS

THE following account of the quaint ceremony with which the Military Company of London took possession of the Patent of Arms that had been granted to them by the College of Arms seems of sufficient general interest to be given here.

The Company was one of those early Volunteer Associations formed for national and local defensive purposes, long before the days of the Volunteers, who came into existence about the middle of the last century and supplied much material for the Punch artists of those days, and have but recently been done away with.

In the case of the more modern regiments they do not appear to have obtained from the Heralds' College Armoria Insignia, but in the past such honourable distinction was more highly prized, as we shall see.

Of these early military associations the only surviving one is the Honorable Artillery Company; the Company whose arms we are giving appears to have ceased to exist about the close of the eighteenth century, and we know little of its history, which remains to be written.

That this body was in existence as late as 1780 is quite certain, as we learn from RAIKES' History of the Honorable Artillery Company that they then elected Capt. Barnard TURNER of the Military Association to be one of their members in acknowledgement of the considerable services he rendered in the suppression of the Gordon Riots.

Sir Barnard TURNER—for he was knighted when Sheriff of London and Middlesex in 1782—was a member of the Company of Musicians, an Alderman and M.P. for the City of London, honours which came to him fairly early in life, for he was killed by a fall from his horse in 1784, being then only forty-two years of age. The Honorable Artillery Company gave him a military funeral, which attracted a considerable concourse of people. The Company also erected a tombstone inscribed to his memory.

The grant of Arms to the Military Company, with the account of the ceremonial with which they conveyed their Patent of Arms from Herald's College to their Head Quarters, is taken from Add. MS. 26,758 in the British Museum, in which the Arms are roughly tricked with letters for the colours:

"Arms of the Military Company by S^r John BURROUGH A^o 1639." Gu. an imperial crown ppr. cap crimson, on a chief arg. a cross of S^t George throughout, of the first. Crest. From a princes coronet or, a cubit arm in armour erect ppr. garnished gold, the gauntlet grasping a tilting spear in bend of a brown colour headed gold thereon a square banner gu. and inscribed with the motto "Ich Dien" in gold letters and fringed of the last. Supporters, Two horses salient arg. with face and neck armour ppr. bridled trappings and saddle cloth gu. saddle az. stirrup and tassels or. motto Floreat Vigeate corona.

"The Arms of the Warlike Society & Fellowship of the Military Company granted by S^r John BURROUGH, Garter, March 1639: And the Company fetched their Patent in their Warlike Habilliments, with a Troop of Horse and a Company of Foot and a guard of Switzers. M^r RILEY als Blewmantle carrying the Patent of their Arms open, Capt. MANWARING als Richmond Herald carrying a large shield wherein was painted the full Portrature of their Arms, Bearing these in great state to their House nere Charing Cross."

We hope to hear more of this Company, and will be glad to receive any reference thereto.

ORIENTATION OF GRAVES

An exception to the rule that graves should face E. is found in the case of the graves of priests of the (Roman) Catholic Church, who are buried with the feet to the West.

HEREFORDSHIRE PEDIGREES

By EVERARD GREEN, F.S.A.

(SOMERSET HERALD).

THE following is a copy of the index to three volumes of MSS. pedigrees, which the late Robert Biddulph PHILLIPS, of Longworth, left to the Benedictines at St Michael's Priory, Belmont, near Hereford.

Mr PHILLIPS was born 30 July, 1798; B.A. of Trinity College, Oxford, 1820. He began his collection in 1822, and served the office of High Sheriff in the year 1838. He died without male issue, whilst his two daughters died unmarried. His own pedigree is to be found in the College of Arms (Arundel II, 63).

I am indebted to a correspondent for the three COOKMAN notes following. They are from the registers of Walton-on-Thames—probably only selections:

"John and Sarah COOKMAN, parents of the children named on this sheet, are presumably identical with the John COOKMAN, bachelor, and Sarah GREGORY, spinster, both of Walton, who were married at Walton on 5th July 1772, by licence.

"On 12th October, 1725, Matthew COOKMAN and Ann BELDHAM, a widow, were married at Walton.

"Under date 1732, Matthew COOKMAN is entered in the Poor Rate List of Walton for 4/6."

A HENRY VIII LIBEL ACTION

LIBEL actions occur frequently in the records of the Court of Common Pleas. This rather amusing one is taken from C.P. Plea Roll 1044 Trin: Term 16 Hen: viij on membrane 275 recto.

Thomas Lyn, Esq., brings an action against Alexander Cundale, late of Bassingburn, in Cambridgeshire, carpenter, stating that the said Alexander, desiring to injure his good name and reputation, called him a thief, which the said Thomas most utterly denies. The Latin breaks off in order to give the exact words used by the defendant, which were: "Thow art a strong theffe; thow hast stolen a shepe and eten the shepe owte of the pott." These words were openly and publicly spoken, whereby the plaintiff's name and reputation was in danger of injury, and he demands £40 for damages. The case is adjourned until the Octave of S. John the Baptist, so unfortunately we do not know the result.

BOOKS RECEIVED

DWELLY's Parish Records. Wells Transcripts. Vol. I. Compiled by Arthur J. JEWERS. Edited by E. DWELLY. 485 pp. 15s. Herne Bay (E. DWELLY). London: (A. H. MAYHEW.)

This volume, being the first of what we hope will be a long series, contains extracts from the Bishops' Transcripts at Wells, relating to 134 Somersetshire parishes, commencing with the letters A to H. Although in some cases a parish is only represented by an odd year, nevertheless the value of this work is great, when it is considered that only those returns in a very dilapidated condition were transcribed; in fact, many of them, Mr JEWERS points out, "are lace-like from decay."

There is no index to this volume.

QUERIES

20. DAY and PYKE. I seek to learn the ancestry and identity of Mrs Sarah DAY, widow, who, as of St Leonard's, Shoreditch, married, in 1746, William PYKE. Was FREEMAN her maiden name?

21. LAWS. Wanted, the parentage of Richard Lloyd LAWS, who was married 23rd January, 1816, at the Church of St John, Calcutta, E.I., to Frances (b. 29 October, 1799—India Office Records), daughter of James STARK and Frances (née CUNNINGHAM), his wife.

UNRECORDED BIOGRAPHIES

FRANCIS GOURNAY (OR GURNEY), OF MALDON, ESSEX.

By CHAS. A. BERNAU, F.S.G.

THE life of Francis GOURNAY has been written already more than once, but former historians of the GURNEY, or GOURNAY, family appear to have attempted it without first consulting the records at the Public Record Office. Recent investigations there have brought many hitherto forgotten facts to light, and it is felt, therefore, that a revised biography of this interesting individual may help to solve a certain genealogical problem which has puzzled many genealogists for years.

HIS PARENTAGE

Francis GOURNAY, born in 1628, with whom this article deals, was the son of another Francis GOURNAY, a member of the Merchant Taylors' Company, and a merchant living in the parish of St. Benet Finck, London, the sixth son of Henry GOURNAY, of Great Ellingham and West Barsham, Norfolk. In or before the year 1618 Francis GOURNAY married Anne, daughter of William BROWNING, of Norwich, merchant, and later of Maldon, Essex. In 1634 Francis attested the GOURNAY pedigree in the Heralds' Visitation of London. It is thought that he may have been identical with a Francis GOURNAY who gave Sir Henry SPELMAN a manuscript pedigree of the GOURNAY family.

HIS PARENTS' CHILDREN

There is no complete record of the children of Francis GOURNAY and Anne BROWNING, and the information about those of whose existence we know is fragmentary.

1. . . . Dorothy, baptized at St. Benet Finck 2nd March 1619. Living in 1634 (Visit. London).
2. . . . Roger, baptized at St. Benet Finck 27th Decr. 1621. Living 1634, then described as eldest son and heir (Visit. London).
3. . . . Frances, baptized at St. Benet Finck 18th January 1626; buried there 30th September of the same year.
4. . . . Francis, baptized at St. Benet Finck 13th November 1628. Of whom hereafter.

5. . . . Lucretia, baptized at St. Benet Finck 28th Octr. 1630. Living in 1634 (Visit. London).
6. . . . Thomas, baptized at St. Benet Finck 19th April 1636. In 1681 letters of administration of the goods of his brother, John GURNEY of Maldon, a bachelor, were granted to him.
7. . . . Margaret, baptized at St. Benet Finck 28th July 1637.
8. . . . Anne (probably the eldest child), living in 1634 (Visit. London).
9. . . . John, evidently born after 1634. As stated already, in 1681 letters of administration of the goods of John GURNEY, of Maldon, a bachelor, were granted to his brother, Thomas GURNEY. It has been suggested that John and Thomas are identical with the sons of Francis GURNEY (b. 1628) as no evidence could be discovered that there was a John in the same generation as this Francis, but that evidence has now been found, for in 1674 John GURNEY, of St. Mary's Maldon, paid the tax on nine hearths. (Lay Sub. 246/22), and it is not reasonable to suppose that this entry applied to a youth then only 19 years old whose father was still living in the same parish.
- ?10. . . . Richard GURNEY, mentioned in the corporation accounts of Maldon under date 1677. The will of Michael COOPER, of Maldon, gent., dated 18th Feb. 1687 and proved (Comm. Court of London, Essex & Herts.—"Hamor", 207) 26th April 1688, mentions "that piece or parcel of ground in the parish of St. Peter (Maldon) which I lately purchased of Mr. Richard GOURNEY" and later in the same will occurs "all that piece or parcel of waste land which I lately purchased of Mr. Richard GOURNAY".
- ?11. . . . George GURNEY, who married in 1660 at St. Peter's Maldon Mary ELLISTON, widow, and whose son, George, was baptized at the same church in the following year.

With reference to the two last, Richard and George, it should be noted that Francis, born 1628, named two of his sons "Richard" and "George," so that it is by no means improbable that the two abovenamed were brothers of that Francis.

HIS MARRIAGE

In or before the year 1654 Francis GURNEY (born 1628) married Anne, daughter of Jeremiah BROWNING, alderman of Maldon. She was baptized there on 23rd July 1637, so was about nine years her husband's junior. The descendants of John GURNEY of Norwich claim that she is identical with "John GURNEY's mother" who in 1687 gave a certificate under her hand "signifieing her good will and free co(n)cent" to his marriage in that year. There is no evidence on the point but it is not too much to suppose that Francis GURNEY probably married his cousin, as his mother was Anne, daughter of William BROWNING, of Norwich, merchant, and afterwards of Maldon.

The BROWNING family of Maldon does not appear to have been traced from the parish registers and there are very few wills to help us.

On 23rd Decr. 1647 letters of administration of the goods of Jeremiah BROWNINGE, late of Maldon, Co. Essex, deceased, were granted to Jane BROWNINGE the relict of the said deceased (P.C.C.). This entry, we may presume, relates to Francis GURNEY's father-in-law. If so, he died when his daughter Anne was only about ten years old. There is a possibility, however, that it refers to a great-uncle of Anne.

Francis GURNEY was probably a brother-in-law of the Dr. Thomas BROWNING who will be mentioned later.

HIS CHILDREN

The children of Francis GURNEY and Anne BROWNING were:—

1. . . . John, born 7th Octr. and baptized 30th Octr. 1655 at Maldon. Living 1664 as son and heir. (Visit. Essex). Of whom hereafter.
2. . . . Francis, born 14th Feb. and baptized 2nd March 1657 at Maldon; buried there 28th May 1658.
3. . . . George, born 10th June and baptized 20th June 1659 at Maldon; buried there 15th January 1663.
4. . . . Thomas, born 17th March and baptized 31st March 1661 at Maldon. Living 1664 (Visit. Essex).
5. . . . Charles, born 4th Feb. and baptized 24th Feb. 1662 at Maldon; buried there 16th September 1668.
6. . . . Jane. Living 1664 (Visit. Essex).
7. . . . Richard, baptized at Maldon 1st April 1664.
8. . . . Francis, baptized at Maldon 17th Sept. 1665; buried there 6th Jan. 1666.
9. . . . Anne, baptized at Maldon 22nd Jan. 1666.
10. . . . Henry, baptized at Maldon 19th March 1667.

HIS OFFICIAL POSITION

On p. 539 of "The House of GOURNAY" will be found a copy of the deed, dated 12th August 1662, whereby Francis GURNEY and others were appointed Aldermen of Maldon.

He was one of the Bailiffs of Maldon in 1664, as appears by a list of the communicants in the registers of St. Mary's parish.

HIS BUSINESS AND LAWSUITS

On the 3rd May 1676 Francis GOURNEY of Maldon, gent., Peter ALDRIDGE and John DAY of the same, serjeants at mace of the Borough of Maldon and Christopher SAVADGE, yeoman, and John HAWES of the same, labourer, file a Bill in Chancery (Bridges 489/64 & Hamilton 521/90) against Thomas DABBS, Abraham BARTELL alias BARTLETT, Daniel BARTELL alias BARTLETT, Elizabeth, Daniel's wife, James BARTELL alias BARTLETT, Mary, wife of James, Robert BEARD, Jane, wife of Robert, and Hugh BROWNE. From this we see that in September 1675 Thomas DABBS of Maldon "woll kember" was indebted to Francis GOURNEY in the sum of £14. 8. 4 for a bargain of wool sold to him by GOURNEY and, GOURNEY pressing for payment, DABBS fearing that GOURNEY would arrest him combined with the other defendants and left only his wife in possession of his house. GOURNEY entered an attachment in the Court of Records of Maldon and attached the house and estate of the said DABBS. The two aforesaid serjeants attached them and the goods were valued and found to be worth £11. 12. 6. They were carried away in SAVADGE's cart. Abraham BARTLETT has brought an action of trespass against the plaintiffs pretending he has a bill of sale on the goods. The Answer alleges that the Bill of Sale represents a genuine transaction and was not entered into merely for the purpose of defeating the attachment.

On the 22nd May 1677 Francis GOURNEY of Maldon, gent., files a Bill in Chancery (BRIDGES 608/99) against William CORNELL. From this we see that in the year 1673, in the time of the late wars between His Majesty and the States of Holland, Francis GOURNEY, having acquaintance with one William CORNELL, of the town of Poole, merchant, who dealt in a commodity arising in those parts called fuller's earth or tobacco pipe clay, asked the said CORNELL to send him speedily a vessel of the said clay of the best sort during the continuance of the said wars and, if he could not send the same while the wars lasted, that he should send none at all because then the same would come to a bad market and the price thereof would be fallen. CORNELL answered this letter to the effect that he could not, in regard of the danger of the enemies, send any such commodity by sea while the war lasted and GOURNEY, receiving this answer, gave over all further expectation of receiving the said commodity. Yet, later when peace had been made some three months and the seas had been cleared of the enemy, and also the price of the said commodity had fallen to half its former value, the said CORNELL caused several vessels of the said tobacco pipe clay to be sent by sea to Maldon upon GOURNEY's account, signifying by letter that he demanded 22/- per ton for the same. The clay was put into a warehouse and GOURNEY exposed it for sale to various chapmen but he could not make any "gainfull sale" of it on account of its badness, roughness and coarseness. GOURNEY states that he had little or no skill in the said commodity but that several persons who had skill and knowledge therein declared that it was unfit for work and they could make no use for it even if it were given to them for nothing. Consequently GOURNEY could not sell a quarter of the consignment and hath the balance still by him unsold. Customers and chapmen who used to deal with him formerly for that commodity are now lost to him. He has been forced to get some more and better of the like commodity to mix with it and so by that means "doth utter" a little of it sometimes at but 20/- per ton, being all he can get for it, even though it is now so mixed with good clay. CORNELL sent also a parcel of Purbecke Stones to GOURNEY, requesting him to pay the money due for the clay and stones to CORNELL's order. GOURNEY has thus paid to CORNELL and for his account about £30 and considers that, in view of the badness of the clay, he has paid enough and indeed he is "much damnified by dealing with him". CORNELL came to Maldon about October 1675 to settle his accounts with the various persons in those parts with whom he had dealt and to GOURNEY among the rest. At that time he admitted the receipt of the £30 but demanded a further sum as due to him; whereupon GOURNEY took him to several persons who had bought some of the clay and they informed CORNELL of its badness and that the clay was an unworkable commodity and unfit for use. GOURNEY requested him to take back the clay, but CORNELL, being satisfied as to the truth about its condition, directed him to sell the remainder as fast as he could and for what he could get for it, stating that he would approve of the sales, however little resulted from them; further that whatever GOURNEY could raise by such sales he was to apply in the first place to pay himself for the difference between the actual value of the stones and the £30 which GOURNEY had overpaid for them. Any balance should be applied by GOURNEY to refunding himself for the charges of freight, sales and warehousing, etc. The money in hand from previous sales was paid over to CORNELL, therefore GOURNEY claims that he is no longer indebted to CORNELL, yet notwithstanding this CORNELL denies the agreement and the said payments and hath lately caused GOURNEY to be arrested by order of the Court of King's Bench upon a supposed debt of £43.

Francis GOURNEY's tragic death only a few weeks after this Bill was filed probably accounts for our finding no Answer to it.

HIS DEATH

The "House of GOURNAY" states that Francis GOURNEY lived in the parish of St. Mary in the lower part of the town of Maldon upon the banks of the Blackwater in a house which he rented of the Corporation of that borough, in which he was a merchant. This fact is mentioned here because the position of the house is significant. If its tenant wished to commit suicide by drowning, the Blackwater flowed past his house. Actually Francis GOURNEY was found drowned in his own well. At the time it was held to be suicide much to the detriment of his family as the personal estate of a suicide was forfeited to the Crown. We have not been able to find the records of the coroner's inquest but it is probable that a modern coroner's jury would have considered it an accidental death or, at the worst, suicide during temporary insanity. Our knowledge of the facts of the case are gleaned from several caveats entered by interested persons very soon after his death.

“ On the 13th of August 1677. Let nothing be done in the estate of Francis GURNEY of St. Mary's in the town of Maldon in Essex, deceased, unknown to Julian SWALLOW acting for the interest of Thomas BROWNING S.T.P., the chief creditor.” (P.C.C.).

It will be seen that the above Caveat was entered the day after Francis GOURNEY's death. “ The chief creditor ” is probably a legal fiction, though it may be correct. It would almost appear as if this caveat was entered on behalf of the family by the brother-in-law of the deceased to protect, if possible, the interests of the widow and young children.

“ August 20th 1677. That noe Grant passe of the Estate of Francis GURNEE of Malden in Essex or of Robert READER of Baddow in the same County, who drowned themselves the 12th of this instant August: at my Lord Treasurers desire ”.
(Public Record Office, S.P. Dom. Entry Book, 45/42.)

And on the same page of the same volume:—

“ August 21st 1677. That noe Grant passe of the Estate of Francis GURNEY, of Malden in Essex, who drowned himself in his owne well on Sunday night the 12th of this instant August. At the desire of Samuell PEPYS Esqr.”

This is the Samuel PEPYS. We have seen it stated in an annotated edition of his “ Diary ” that this caveat was entered by him as a kindly action to save the property for the GOURNEY family, if possible.

“ Fra: GURNEE of Malden in Essex (here follows the word “ who ” deleted) drown'd himself the 12th Instant Augt.
Robert READER of Baddow in the same County alsoe drown'd himself the same day.
Caveats to be entered by my Lord Trea'rs Comand & in his name.
Augt. 20th memn. Mr. BRENT entered this Caveat in Mr. Sec'rys name.”

The last entry is in S.P. Dom. Car. II., 396/21. Then in the same volume, folio 34, we find:—

“ Francs GURNEY of Malden in Essex drowned himselfe in his owne Well on Sunday night the 12. of this instant August 1677.
At the desire of Samuell PEPYS Esqr. August 21st 1677 ”.

The next entry is in the P.C.C. Caveats:—

“On the 25th of August 1677. Let nothing be done in the estate of the aforesaid Francis GURNEY unknown to MILLER acting for Thomas HASKIN, a creditor of the deceased”.

HIS PROPERTY

We glean particulars of his property at the time of his death from Exchequer Special Commission No. 6222. This is a Commission dated 20th August 1677 directed to the Sheriff of Essex and others. Whereas a certain Francis GURNEY late of Malden and Robert READER late of Baddow have committed suicide the aforesaid Commissioners are appointed by the King to inquire by the oath of lawful men of Essex when they committed suicide and into whose hands all their goods and chattels have been taken, and to take the same for the King's use. They are instructed to sell some of the goods, when valued by the jurors, and the money arising from the sale shall be paid into the Exchequer for the King's use. The Inquisition was taken at Chelmsford on 11th Octr. 1677. The jurors say that Francis GURNEY committed suicide* on 12th August 1677 in Malden, on which date he was possessed of goods etc. to the value of £560. 13. 4 as specified in a schedule annexed to the Commission. The jurors say that Robert READER is dead but whether by suicide or not they do not know.

From the schedule we see that GOURNEY possessed £5 in money, 100 bushels of salt, 360 bushels of coal, 40 bushels of white salt, . . . loads of rye, 4½ loads of hay, 2 iron salt pans, a flockbed, a brass pot, certain furnace irons, 2 salt tubs, a plough, a harrow, a cart, a boat, a cistern, another tub for salt, 1000 faggots, 2 colts, 13 sheep and lumber in the possession of Samuel LOVE of Goldenhanger, all valued at £54. 13. 6.

. RADLEY of Tolleshunt Major owed him £2. 2. 8 for merchandize, NICHOLSON of Tolleshunt Graygoose owed him 12/-, Robert FRANCKE of Goldenhanger owed him 11/8, Joshua THWAITE of Chelmsford owed him £1. 16. 0, George JEFFERYES owed him 18/-, William HULCK of Chelmsford owed him £7, Charles FULLER the Younger of Chelmsford owed him £1. 2. 6, John BETTS owed him 18/-, William EVES of Mousham hamlet, owed him 30/-, William VERNON of Maldon owed him 9/-, and Christopher DUKE of Albemarle, owed him £78.

The jurors further stated on oath that Francis GURNEY was possessed of a certain messuage in Maldon for a great term of years to the value of £20. And also he was in like manner possessed of 14 acres of meadow or pasture in Goldenhanger Marsh and of certain Salt Coates in Goldenhanger for a great term of years to the value of £13 yearly. In all appraised by the jurors at £91. And also he was possessed of certain goods and chattels in Maldon to the value of £300.

* It should here be noted that this is not a coroner's inquest, but an independent inquisition arising therefrom.

THOMAS BROWNING, D.D.

Mention has been made above of a caveat entered on 13th August 1677 in the interests of Thomas BROWNING, S.T.P. The following notes about him will not be out of place here.

FOSTER's "Alumni Oxonienses" has "Thomas BROWNING, B.A. from Pemb. College, Cambridge, 1635 (incorp. as M.A. 1st Feb. 1642/3) D.D. per literas Regias 1660, rector of Wickham Bishop, Essex, 1661".

Lay Subsidy 246/12 (Assessment of Hearth Tax, 15 Car. II., 1663/4) mentions the house of Dr. BROWNING at St. Mary's Maldon as being untenanted.

In the calendars of Feet of Fines under date Hilary Term, 32 & 33 Car. II., (1680), there is a record of a fine between Stephen CRISPE and Thomas BROWNEING, S.T.P., relating to land in Woodham Ferris, Essex.

The will of Henry JERMYN, of Wickham Bishop, Essex, dated 1680, (proved Comm. London—Essex & Herts, "Heydon" 481), names "Dr. Thomas BROWNING and Anne, his wife". It is possible that Francis GURNEY and Anne, his sister, may have married a sister and brother, Anne BROWNING and Dr. Thomas BROWNING.

The will of Thomas BROWNING, of Wickham Bishop, Essex, Doctor in Divinity, dated 16th June 1694, was proved in the Comm. London—Essex & Herts on 3rd May 1705. From this we see that he was the father of Ann, wife of the Revd. Christopher WRAGG, of Little Wigborough, Essex. Unfortunately he makes no mention of the GURNEYS in his will.

THE PROBLEM !

We have seen that Francis GURNEY's eldest son, John, was born on 7th Octr. and baptized at Maldon on 30th Octr. 1655 and that he was living, aged 9 years, in 1664. He disappears from Maldon for we have shewn that it is improbable that he was the John GURNEY of Maldon who died a bachelor in 1681. The question is his identity with John GURNEY, of St. Gregory's parish, Norwich, cordwainer, who became a member of the Society of Friends and married on 4th Octr. 1687 at Woodbridge Elizabeth SWANTON of Grundisburgh, Suffolk. He died in 1721 aged 66. This John GURNEY, of Norwich, is the ancestor of the present family of GURNEY of Norfolk. Family tradition asserts that John, of St. Gregory's, Norwich, was the son of Francis, of Maldon, and certainly their ages tally. However, there is no actual proof of the identity and several of the members of the GURNEY family are anxious to see the descent either proved or disproved. One of them has offered a reward for the discovery of such evidence. The matter is of almost general interest owing to the large number of families which have inter-married with John's descendants.

MELBOURNE (AUSTRALIA) GENERAL CEMETRY

BY G. P. TOWNEND, F.S.G.,

Local Hon. Sec. for Victoria and Tasmania of the Society of Genealogists.

MEMORIES are revived by a walk through a graveyard, and it is a foolish notion that only a man with a morbid taste may find interest in the resting-place of the dead.

Tombstones are often historical records. The life of a tombstone out here is fifty years, in England longer, but the reason why not so long here is because of the violent storms, the blistering heat and other causes.

If not periodically reminded, we are apt to forget where the bones of our distinguished dead are lying, and forgetfulness is always followed by neglect. But fortunately, ingratitude is not a characteristic of Melbourne people, and in the cemeteries of the city, and in the suburbs there is evidence of their appreciation of men who helped to make Australia's history.

In the Melbourne General Cemetery there are numerous monuments that have been erected by public subscription to mark the feelings of a grateful people.

A rough-hewn rock, emblematic of those rugged pioneers who first explored the interior of Australia, stands above the graves of BURKE and WILLS, and a less pretentious headstone shows the spot where lies the remains of John KING, the only one who was left to recount the adventures of the expedition. He died in January 1872 at the age of 31 years.

The tallest monument in this Cemetery has been erected above the remains of Sir Charles HOTHAM who died in December 1855 aged 49 years. He was the first Governor Chief of Victoria, and a granite column, surmounted by figures and a cross in freestone, was erected by the Legislative Council which voted the money in 1856.

Not far from this grave is that of Sir John Bates THURSTON, who was Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Fiji at the time of his death.

He was on his way to England, but died aboard when the boat was in Melbourne.

Near by rests Sir Redmond BARRY, the first Puisne Judge in Victoria, and who was the founder of the Melbourne Public Free Library.

Sir Will^m STAWELL and others who have interpreted Victoria's laws are also buried in this cemetery, and their memory is recalled by handsome tombstones.

Many notable politicians received burial in different parts of this graveyard.

Almost side by side lies the remains of Robert RAMSAY, who held Ministerial office between 1872 and 1889, also Duncan GILLIES who sat in seventeen Parliaments of Victoria.

A monument erected by public subscription marks the grave of Richard HEALES, who died in 1864, and also one above the body of John Joseph MADDEN, who represented Belfast in the Legislative Assembly from 1883 to the time of his death in 1886. A slab indicates the appreciation of the Police Force, for members of which he endeavoured to obtain the franchise.

A Celtic cross of granite, nearly 25 ft. in height, attracts the visitor to the grave of Sir John O'SHANASSY, whose name stands out conspicuously in Victoria's political history. He died in 1883.

In an obscure spot, marked by a plain stone of ancient design, lies the body of Alaster MACKENZIE, who was at one time Colonial Treasurer.

Strangely enough, the slab bears no date, but on inquiry at the Registrars', I was informed the burial took place in the early fifties.

A monument of grey granite has been erected over the grave of Robert HODDLE, who planned the design of the City of Melbourne in 1837; he was buried in 1881.

A substantial tomb indicates the resting-place of John Pascoe FAWKNER, who founded the City of Melbourne; he died in Collingwood in September 1869.

"A Life of Labour" is the inscription over a marble representation of his profile.

The most noticeable author interred in the cemetery is Marcus CLARKE, who died in 1881. A "broken column" marks the spot, and it was erected by a few South Australian friends as a tribute to his genius. Loving hands keep the grave in good order.

The first interment was John Alexander BURNETT. He was the founder of that great Australasian house of Dalgetty & Co.

"THE PUZZLE EPITAPH"

In PETTIGREW's "Collection of Epitaphs" (BOHN's Standard Library, 1857), page 156, there is a note on "The Puzzle Epitaph," which appears on page 29 of the BRITISH ARCHIVIST, viz., that it is generally attempted to be explained by a popular legend of ten men having perished by the falling in of a gravel-pit, and then being buried together; this would not, however, explain the line:

"By men of strife" and it has been conjectured to refer to the time of the Civil Wars, when the bodies of ten persons may have been disinterred either for the lead of the coffins, or to be suspended on gibbets by the soldiers of Cromwell, and were afterwards deposited in one grave.

A WOMAN WAS MADE TO BE WHICH?

A comfort? A curse? A blessing? A nurse?

A woman was made to bewitch.

The following entry which occurs on the Plea Rolls, for 7 Elizabeth (1565) is worthy of being recorded in the "B.A.":

DEVON.

John DAWE, late of Colompton, yeoman is summoned to answer John BERY in a plea whereby the same John had maliciously tried to injure the good name and reputation of John BERY by infamous and scandalous deductions, by publicly using these words at Colompton: "thowe John BERY arte the cause of thy motherinlawes deathe for thow dydest hire Johanne HAKE Wedowe to be Witche her Wherof she dyed."

Claim of £40 for damages.

ISLE OF SHEPPEY

Visitors to this part of Kent should not omit the ancient churchyard of Minster, near Sheerness. The epitaph to a master gunner (Henry WORTH, d. 1779, Aug. 26, aged 57) is curious and might be copied for the purpose of being recorded in THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST. The headstone will be found to the S. of a public footpath which runs through the churchyard from W. to E.

OCTOBER, 1913.

A BOOK OF FAMILY PORTRAITS

CONTRIBUTED BY HENRY BODDINGTON, J.P., F.S.G.

IN most cases, alas, the higher a genealogist climbs in his family-tree the fewer fruit he finds. This applies especially in the matter of portraits of our ancestors. The proud owner of a country seat, provided with a lengthy portrait-gallery well stocked with ancestral oil paintings, can but little realize the regret his humbler brother-in-the-science experiences at the absence of all pictorial representations of those from whom he descends. On the other hand, he can never know the wonderful joy which is the lot of a searcher who suddenly finds himself for the first time in possession of genuine and speaking likenesses of his eighteenth century forebears—forebears whom until then he has known merely by their names, dates, wills, etc.

Like most of us, the writer was forced to content himself with the usual small and miscellaneous collection of early photographs, silhouettes, etc., until one day an enterprising second-hand bookseller sought him out and offered for quite an insignificant sum a common-place book containing about a dozen 18th century pencil drawings of "BODDINGTONS."

Such a stroke of luck is surely worth recording in the pages of THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST, not to arouse the envy of fellow-genealogists, but to give them the hope that sooner or later some of them may be equally fortunate.

The artist in this case was one James BODDINGTON (1686-1710), nor are we left without his own likeness in the book, for, by the aid of a looking-glass, he has included in it a carefully drawn portrait of himself. It is here reproduced, and it will not be out of place to give at the same time a few details of his life. He was the seventh son of George BODDINGTON (1646-1719), of whom the book also contains a portrait, which will be reproduced in a later number of this magazine. James was only 23 or 24 years old when he died and, judging from this fact and from a legacy in his will, we may conclude that he was not of robust health and was probably also a lameter.

The following is an abstract of his will, which under its dry legal phraseology still reveals the hint of a love story:

Abstract of the Will of James BODDINGTON.

I, James BODDINGTON being sound in mind and understanding doe make and ordaine this my last Will and Testament in manner and forme following Imprimis I give and bequeath to my dearest and most deserving Freind M^{rs} Emlin NORRIS daughter of M^r Wm. NORRIS of London, Boxmaker, I say I give unto her the said Emlin NORRIS the summ of Five Hundred pounds of good and lawfull money of England.

Item I give unto my Bro' Benjamin BODDINGTON the summ of One Hundred pounds.

Item I give unto my sister Sarah BODDINGTON the summ of One Hundred pounds.

Item I give unto my Nephew George WAKEMAN the summ of Fifty pounds.

Item I give unto my Nephew George BODDINGTON (son to my Bro' George BODDINGTON) the summ of Fifty pounds.

Item I give to my Cousin James BODDINGTON son to my uncle James BODDINGTON Tenn pounds.

Item I give to Alice LAURENCE (wife of Thomas LAURENCE, Brick-layer) the summ of Ten pounds.

Item I give to Abigail SMITH (if a servant to any of my Fathers [family] at my decease) the summ of Five pounds.

Item I give and bequeath the remainder of my Estate to charitable uses as my Executor sees fitt to dispose of it but desire a particular regard to be had to the sick and lame.

I also make my honoured Father George BODDINGTON Esq^r., my Executor and question not but he will perform this my last Will and Testament according to my meaning in the foregoing words

Signed and sealed this 31 day of March 1710 by me

A NEW SOUTH WALES “M.I.”

In a tiny cemetery near the township Hassan's Walls, N.S.W., are interred the bodies of six British soldiers. One of the monuments is erected to the memory of Corporal TRAVIS, who died in 1837.

The task of cutting the inscription, which he wrote himself and is still legible, was given to a convict, who was apparently a man of education, for he added two lines in “Latin.”

The inscription, which was actually copied by the writer, is as follows:

To the Memory of
Corporal TRAVIS
late 80th Regiment who departed this life 1837.
“Billited by death,
I, quartered here, remain
But, when the Trumpet sounds,
I'll rise and march again.

The lines added are:

Si sapis quiesce
Suscitatus damnaberis, which being translated literally is:

Lie still, if you're wise:
You'll be damned if you rise.

Indenture tripartite made 24 March 15 Charles II. between Edmund SYLER of Morton, co Lincoln, esq., and Abigail his wife, of the first part. Samuëll DESBOROW of Elsworth, co Huntingdon sic (Cambridge), esq., and Samuëll ATKINS of London, merchant, of the second part. Theophilus HART of Birkwood, co Lincoln, esq., of the third part. Witnesseth that in consideration of £600, paid to said Edmund and Abigail by said Theophilus, and 10s. paid by said Samuëll DESBOROW and Samuel ATKINS, the said Edmund and Abigail have granted to said Theophilus the Rectory, Parsonage and Farm or Grange of Morton aforesaid, with appurtenances, and also the advowson of the vicarage, to have and to hold for twenty one years, at the yearly rent of one pepper corn, upon condition that if said Edmund shall pay to said Theophilus yearly for three years for the forbearance of the £600 at 6 per cent. yearly, at the end of the term of three years, the said principal money to be paid, in which case this indenture and said term of twenty one years to be void, but in default said Theophilus to enter the premises. The said Edmund and Abigail to receive all rents &c. during said three years. The deeds &c. to be placed in the hands of Humfry WALCOT of Lincoln, esq.

A BOOK OF FAMILY PORTRAITS

CONTRIBUTED BY HENRY BODDINGTON, J.P., F.S.G.

GEORGE BODDINGTON, 1646-1719

THESE two portraits, from the BODDINGTON Portrait-book of which we spoke in our last issue, are surmised to be of one and the same person, George BODDINGTON of London, merchant, and to have been taken by his son James when the subject was about 60 years of age.

George BODDINGTON would appear to have been a somewhat remarkable man. He was born 15 October 1646, and baptised on the 30th. at St. Margaret's, Lothbury, as "son of George BODINGTON", that is, of George BODDINGTON, a citizen and "packer", who afterwards permanently injured his health by his exertions in removing his goods at the time of the Great Fire, and of Hannah ADAMS his wife.

Our next record of him is in 1671, when, on 19th. December, two months after the death of his father, he married, at St. James's, Clerkenwell, Mary, daughter of William STEELE, Lord Chancellor of Ireland. He was then 25. His wife died without issue in less than two years and was buried at St. Margaret's, Lothbury, 4 December 1673, in the South Aisle.

In 1674, on the 2nd. July, George BODDINGTON married a second time, the ceremony taking place at Allhallows, London Wall, he being described as of Islington. His second wife was Hannah, a young girl of eighteen, daughter of John COPE, haberdasher, by Hannah his wife, widow of the Rev^d. Ralph VENNING, M.A., of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. By her he begat no less than fourteen children, amongst them James (1686-1710), the portraitist, from whom we get these twenty-six portraits in the BODDINGTON Portrait-book. The eldest child was born in 1675; the youngest in 1692. It was in 1677 that the first London Directory was published. In it we find "George BODDINGTON, Great St. Hellen's", the founder of the firm of West India merchants and ship-owners whose offices are in St. Helen's Place to-day.

The rest we know of George BODDINGTON is little more than a mere recital of offices and dates.

He was a Turkey merchant;

electd Common Councilman of the City of London, 1689;

Governor of the Greenland Company 4 April 1693;

an original Director of the Bank of England at its foundation in 1694;

electd M.P. for Wilton, Wiltshire, 18 July 1702;

a member of the Clothworkers' Company and Master thereof 1705.

He made his will on the 15 March 1717 and left a large property. It was proved by his sons Thomas and Isaac 5 June 1719.

He died at Little St. Helen's 10 May 1719, in the 71st. year of his age, having led a busy life and brought up a large family of children, most of whom did well. He was buried at St. Helen's Bishopsgate next his second wife. She had survived the birth of her fourteenth child but little more than six years, having died in 1699 at the age of 43.

BOULOGNE PROTESTANT CEMETERY

BY COLONEL F. G. NEWPORT-TINLEY, C.B.

THE list of Tombs given below, for which apparently concessions had not been obtained, together with a letter concerning them, dated 17 January 1851 from the Maire of Boulogne to the British Consul, are extracted from the records of the Vice-Consulate at Boulogne.

A copy of the plan of the Cemetery, dated 19 January 1831, is in the possession of the writer.

This cemetery having been closed and the area put to other uses, the list should be of special interest.

The obvious peculiarity in the spelling of certain names is probably due to the difficulty experienced by Foreigners in tackling English names. These peculiarities have in no case been corrected.

Departement

Boulogne-s/M. le 17 Jan. 1851.

Le Maire de la ville de Boulogne-sur-Mer,
A Monsieur le Consul de sa Majesté Britannique
A Boulogne.

Monsieur le Consul.

Le décret du 12 Juin 1804 sur les sépultures, fixe à cinq ans, le terme à l'expiration duquel, les fosses peuvent être ouvertes pour de nouvelles inhumations.

Ce délai est depuis long-temps expiré pour le quatre-vingt-treize tombes dont j'ai l'honneur de vous adresser la liste.

Quelques unes de ces sépultures remontent à 1816, les plus récentes sont de 1830.

Avant de prendre sur ces tombeaux une mesure nécessitée par le défaut d'étendue du cimetière, je crois devoir, Monsieur, vous demander si vous n'auriez pas quelques observations à me présenter.

J'attendrai ces observations pendant un mois, c'est à dire jusqu'au 17 Février, afin que, si vous le jugez à propos, vous puissiez informer les familles, de l'obligation où se trouve l'administration Municipale, d'aviser aux moyens de pourvoir aux inhumations futures.

Veuillez, Monsieur le Consul, agréer l'assurance de ma considération distinguée

Le Maire de Boulogne,
L. FONTAINE.

THE PUZZLE EPITAPH

The idea that Cromwell disinterred ten bodies for the sake of the lead on the coffins, and re-buried them all in one grave, is quite impossible, as Cromwell was never at Christchurch and there was no fighting there, as the town surrendered to the Parliament; besides which the Civil War did not break out until fifteen months after the date on the stone.

The generally accepted story is that they were ten sailors who were drowned and buried in the sand beneath Warren Head, but the lord of the manor interfered and as a result they were buried by the mayor and corporation in one grave to save expense.

This is very probable as the entrance to Christchurch harbour is a very difficult piece of navigation and wrecks are not uncommon there.

Unfortunately the Parish Register is defective for that period (1641), but Henry ROGERS was Mayor of Christchurch that year. By Letters Patent of Henry VIII, the church and churchyard were vested in a Corporation of the churchwardens and inhabitants of the town, and were not the vicar's freehold as in most parishes, this accounts for the mayor's name on the tomb. (See Sept. number, p. 58).

ARMORIAL BEARINGS IN CHURCHES

QUY, CO. CAMBRIDGE.

BY P. J. KING.

MUCH interesting genealogical information can be gathered from the coats of arms on brasses, monuments and stained glass windows in our parish churches, which often confirm or correct the written records. On visiting the Church of Quy (Coiea in Domesday Book) well-known to Cantabs as it stands away from the village on the main road to Newmarket, I found a number of stone shields, but no clue to their emblazoning could be obtained. However a search in old records for the lords of the manor and former vicars, rewarded me in reading these coats of which I venture to give a brief outline with notes I was enabled to unearth. There were formerly three manors in the parish of Stow-cum-Quy. The Manor of Quy was in the family of TRAYLLEY for more than a century previous to 1401, when it passed with other estates to the families of HUGFORD and LACY. This manor was afterwards called Stow-Quy or Holme-Hall and belonged successively to the families of ANSTY 1465, CHOLMELEY, LAWRENCE, CHILD 1673, and WHICHCOTE. Sir Paul WHICHCOTE, Bart., of Quy Hall died in 1721; thence the manor passed to Thomas MARTYN, a banker of London. The old hall was demolished in 1869 and a commodious modern mansion erected on its site, now in the possession of Thomas Musgrave FRANCIS, Esq. In connexion with this manor is the fragment of the ancient Church of St Nicholas on the border of the fens. This was evidently a private chapel as the following accounts show. The Calendar of Patent Rolls 1292 says Will: de BEDFORD is presented to the Chapel of St Nicholas Quye by the King who has custody of the goods of the heir of Walter de TRAILLY. 18 Mar 1340 (Episcopal Register) Andrew de NORTHYONDE is presented to the Free Chapel on TRAILLY's Manor of Quye. 1343 Licence is granted for Chapel of the Manor of Quye. 1349 John CARTYN is presented to the Free Chapel of Quye by John TRAILLY. This is the last record we have but it is interesting as throwing light on the private chapel of a manor as distinguished from the parish church. Another manor to which the advowson of Stow was annexed as early as the year 1273 belonged to the family of ENGAYNE whose arms COLE mentions as being formerly in stained glass; they were: I. az. a fess dancette, between three escallops, arg. for ENGAINE impaling arg. three lozenges, gu. for ESCHALLERS. II arg. a bear ramp. sa. muzzled, or, marked with an annulet, for BERNARD, one of the co-heiresses of Thomas ENGAINE. There was also a third manor called Brians belonging to Brian STAPLETON in the year 1419.

In the church are memorials to ANSTY, STERN, LAWRENCE, CHILD and MARTIN. Of the first-named is a fine brass to John ANSTY 1465 with twelve sons; he is represented in armour, a notable example of the Yorkist period. The sons wear tabards each bearing the arms of ANSTY "or, a cross engr. between four martlets, gu."

John BATEMAN whose arms on a stone escutcheon are "az. a chev. embattled, or, between three martlets, arg." was Rector of Borough Green and founder of Bateman Chantry there; he was presented to Quy 1444. Edward STERN's arms (both on a brass and in stone) read "or, a chev. between three crosses flory, sa." He died in 1641.

Archbishop HERRING (Canterbury 1750), a distinguished prelate, was formerly Vicar here; he was born at Walsoken in Norfolk and died at Croydon in Surrey. His arms on one of the stone shields are those of Canterbury impaling "gu. three lucies haurient, arg. between nine crosses crosslets, or."

The remaining stone shields are to families already mentioned as follows: Erm. two boars pass. in pale, gu. langued, az. tusked and bristled, or, for WHICHCOTE. Erm. a cross raguly, gu., on a chief of the last a lion pass. or, for LAWRENCE.

Jeremy COLLIER the celebrated nonjuror was born at Quy and his name is still familiar as giving a name to a highway known as Colliers Lane.

A SEVENTEENTH CENTURY BROADSIDE

Mr George SEARLE's Case in Parliament. [Date in MS.] 12 Nov. 1685.

OVER Case is the Will, in these words, In the Name of God, Amen, &c. I Nicholas SEARLE do make this my last will &c. All my Lands and Tenements whatsoever, I give and devise unto my neece Mary BRYANT and the Heirs-Males of her Body Lawfully to be Begotten, upon this Condition only and provided, That she do inter-marry with and have Issue Male by one sirnamed SEARLE or SERLE. And for defect hereof, and of both the said Conditions, I give and devise all my said Lands and Tenements unto Elizabeth BRYANT, my neece, and the Heirs Males of her

Presented by Henry BODDINGTON, Esq., J.P., F.S.G.

Body lawfully to be Begotten upon the like Condition, also, that she do Intermarry with and have Issue Male by one sirnamed SEARLE, or SERLE; And for defect thereof, I give and devise all my said Lands and Tenements unto my Couzin George SEARLE for three score years, if he live so long, and after his Decease to the Heirs-Males of his Body lawfully to be Begotten, And their Issue Male forever, &c.

George SEARLE in the Will named is the Heir at Law by descent, as well as remainder-Man in Tail.

The Bill preferred in Parliament is by one SAVERY, in order to have his Name changed to SEARL, whereby Mary BRYANT may be capacitated to Marry him, and so to Barr the Remainder in Tail, contrary to the intent of the Donor and the Will.

'Tis generally discoursed that he is already Married to the said Mary BRYANT; if so, then they come to (sic) late to be called SEARLE. But we can't prove it.

MRS EMLIN NORRIS

FROM her portrait in the portrait-book of James BODDINGTON (1686-1710) Mrs Emlin NORRIS was evidently a woman of beauty, strength and refinement. All we know of her is contained in a reference in the will of the portraitist, which seems to point to a romantic attachment. He died when only twenty-four, and thus refers to the lady in question:

"Imprimis, I give and bequeath unto my dearest and most deserving Freind M^{rs} Emlin NORRIS daughter of M^r William NORRIS of London, Boxmaker, I say I give unto her the said Emlin NORRIS the summ of Five hundred pounds of good and lawfull money of England."

This was a handsome bequest just over two hundred years ago, and adds interest to the will of a young man who, after various legacies, left "the remainder of my estate to charitable uses as my Executor sees fitt to dispose of it but desire a particular regard to be had to the sick and lame."

In the portrait-book the finished portrait—a little spoiled we think by what looks like a subsequent re-touching in pencil of the facial line—is accompanied by an outline study of the same face of striking purity and strength.

Wise James BODDINGTON to lay up for our kindly contemplation a glimpse of your little vision of romance. So indeed do we prove that Art is long and Time not impossible to cheat—if only we take a little pains.

HENRY FIELDING'S BOYHOOD

BY F. J. POPE, F.R.Hist.S.

AMONG the records of the Court of Chancery are documents of the years 1720 to 1723 which shed some light on the early life of the boy who was afterwards to write Tom Jones. Henry FIELDING was, it will be remembered, the eldest son of Major-General Edmund FIELDING (styled in the records now under review Colonel FIELDING, the Honorable Edmund FIELDING or Edmund FIELDING esquire), by his wife Sarah, daughter of Sir Henry GOULD, of Sharpham Park, Somerset. Sir Henry died in 1710, and it was apparently in that year, certainly not later, that Edmund FIELDING with his family moved to East Stower, Dorset. In 1710 the future novelist was but three years old, so that East Stower may be regarded as the home of his earliest recollection, and continued to be his home till after his first marriage. The house at East Stower is known to have been of moderate size, to have been built of stone and to have contained a quantity of handsomely carved oak, and the outbuildings included a malt-house, brew-house and coach-house. The estate had been the property of Sir Henry GOULD, who by his will left to trustees a bequest of £3,000 for the use of his daughter, Sarah FIELDING, and her children, but expressly excluded her husband from any part or share in the trust or its management. The property was in 1713 conveyed by the trustees in satisfaction of this bequest.

The suits in Chancery concerned the trust-estate. The papers comprise a bill of Dame Sarah GOULD (widow of Sir Henry), acting on behalf of her infant grandchildren, against their father, an answer to this bill, a bill filed by Colonel FIELDING against Lady GOULD, a dozen affidavits, and some orders of the Court. In 1720 Lady GOULD complained that since the death of her daughter, which occurred in 1718, the Colonel had appropriated the rents and profits to his own use and had neglected to maintain and educate his children in a proper manner, and had, moreover, married a widow named Rapha, who had formerly kept an eating-house in London, and being an Italian and a Roman Catholic, was not a fit person to have the care of her stepchildren. The grandmother further asserted that the children were being maintained and educated at her own expense and pleaded that the terms of the trust should be observed. The father's answer contains the statements that he was using the income from the estate, estimated at £150 a year, for the benefit of his children, that Lady GOULD had had no expense in providing for them, and that his wife had not kept an eating-house and was not an Italian. He is significantly silent on the subject of his wife's religion, but declares his own attachment to the Protestant Faith, and his intention to bring up his children in his own religion, and points to the fact that, being in the Commission of Peace for the county of Dorset, he had always dealt severely with persons brought before him and guilty of anything like disaffection to His Majesty. In his bill, dated in the following year (1721) he traversed the same ground but added that Dame Sarah GOULD and others had detained his children from him and were educating them without his consent. Such, put briefly, were the matters in dispute.

In endeavouring to extract from the various documents details relating to the domestic affairs of the FIELDINGS, and more particularly to anything bearing on the conditions in which Henry FIELDING's boyhood was passed, there is, as might be expected, an occasional difficulty in reconciling conflicting statements. But there are many matters on which the evidence is not at variance, and, moreover, we have the orders of the Court to guide us. These orders favoured Lady GOULD's contentions, and there are certain inferences to be drawn from various sources which do not conduce to any great respect for Colonel FIELDING's character. Lady GOULD mentions incidentally that neither she nor her husband regarded their daughter's marriage with approval, and it has been seen how Sir Henry GOULD in his will indicated his distrust of his son-in-law. There must have been reason for this distrust and a reason may be found in a statement by the Colonel himself. In 1722 Colonel FIELDING was suing in the Court of Chancery (the suit is entitled "FIELDING v. MIDFORD") for the repayment of £780 or more which he had, in 1716, lost in playing at faro at Prince's Coffee House in St. James'. He bases his claim on the grounds that he had been tricked and that such gaming was illegal! It becomes plain, then, that though Lady GOULD in her fight for her grandchildren had personally nothing to gain, the Colonel, as a gambler, and being (as he admits in 1721) in want of money, must have been subjected to the temptation of applying the trust money to his own needs. That he was in debt is also apparent from an order in Court that he was to account for a sum of £700 borrowed from his aunt (or aunt-in-law), Mrs COTTINGTON.

It can hardly be expected that with such a father Henry FIELDING can have passed a happy boyhood. Of his earliest years nothing definite can be related save that one Mary BENTHAM was for several years in his mother's service as nurse to the children, and during a part at least of the same period Anne de la BORDE was their governess. Both remained at East Stower till 1719. On the mother's death, her husband's aunt, Mrs Katherine COTTINGTON, came from Salisbury to superintend the household and Colonel FIELDING fled to London, which he appears to have been in the habit of visiting frequently. The year that followed was probably a time of peace for Henry and his brother and sisters, but the Colonel complained that, owing to the indulgence of their grandmother GOULD and Mrs COTTINGTON, they became "very headstrong," so that he was compelled to send them to school. It was in May, 1719, a year after Sarah FIELDING's death, that Colonel FIELDING first brought his new wife to East Stower. Her coming was heralded by the arrival from London of a servant, nominally a dairymaid, named Mary HOWARD (variously described as a Roman Catholic or Presbyterian), to whom Mrs COTTINGTON was compelled to deliver the keys of the establishment. Under Mary HOWARD's rule came a change for the worse. The children were, it was said, fed on bad bread and cheese and "stinking whey butter," and the beer was so "small" that they were forced to drink water for several days together. When they refused their food they were beaten and abused, and were frequently "used in a most barbarous, cruel and inhumane manner." Of course there is evidence to the contrary. Servants of Colonel FIELDING allege that Mrs FIELDING treated her step-children with great tenderness, and the steward describes the dinner table as furnished with two or even three or four good dishes of meat besides "deserts of fruit" and plenty of strong beer. They do not comment on the charges of beating and general ill-treatment. It may be gathered that the conditions varied, there being, perhaps, sometimes luxury and indulgence and at other times a deficiency of food and a free use of the rod. Mrs COTTINGTON was especially interested in religious matters. She related how Mrs FIELDING, being a Papist, had prevented the children from being taught the Church catechism, had locked up the Bible and "History" in which they had been accustomed to read, and had left her Romish prayer-books "in y^e windowes of y^e rooms" in order that the children might study them. It may be conjectured that at this point Lady GOULD intervened and insisted on her grandchildren being sent to school. Henry went to Eton in Oct., 1719, at a cost of £60 or £70 a year, his four sisters to a boarding-school at Salisbury, kept first by Mrs DEER and afterwards by Mrs Mary ROOKES, and the younger boy Edmund, then aged three or four years, to his grandmother's. It was, perhaps, considered that this was a satisfactory arrangement for all parties, but Henry was the cause of a fresh outbreak of war. On the 19th April 1721, he ran away ("eloped" is the word used) from Eton to his grandmother at Salisbury—no easy exploit, perhaps, for a lad of fourteen. The father sent a servant from London to bring the boy back, but the messenger was not admitted into the house and had to content himself with standing beneath the windows and uttering, in unprintable terms, the grossest abuse of Lady GOULD. A couple of months later the Colonel filed his bill in Chancery demanding the return of his children to his care and on the 30th November following the Court marked its opinion of the matter by directing that Henry, who had evidently in the meantime returned to school, should be with his grandmother during the Christmas recess. A similar order was issued for the Whitsuntide recess, and later an order of more general application that none of the children were to be moved without leave of the Court, and that all, "at any breaking up of schools," were to remain with Lady GOULD. The suits in Chancery were determined in Michaelmas term, 1723, when Lady GOULD and Mrs COTTINGTON were appointed trustees to administer the trust estate, a settlement which, in view of the father's impecunious condition, must have had the effect of removing Henry and the other children of Sarah FIELDING from the control of their father and stepmother. It may be added that Lady GOULD lived to the year 1733 so that she saw her eldest grandchild attain manhood. Though she died at Salisbury, she was buried at East Stower.

The intervention of Lady GOULD and Mrs COTTINGTON in the affairs of the FIELDING family cannot have failed to produce a great effect on Henry FIELDING's career, and there can be no doubt that the records in Chancery, mentioned here, will be of value to all students of the life of the great novelist.

In the indexes of Chancery suits, "FIELDING v. FIELDING" is filed as No. 259/37, "FIELDING v. GOULD" is in Bundle 2283, and "FIELDING v. MIDFORD" is in Bundle 2726.

[A short account of the documents was printed in The Times of 17th Dec.]

QUERIES

26. COURTNEY. Wanted, information concerning the parentage and lineage of the brothers William, James and (John?) COURTNEY. William COURTNEY was born on October 25th, 1799, probably in Devonshire, and with his brother James went to Australia about 1825. The family at one time is believed to have resided in Birmingham.

27. THOMPSON. Wanted, ancestry of William THOMPSON, physician, of St Katherine's by the Tower, London; he married first Martha . . . , his second wife being Anne SWADDELL. He died in 1775, aged 65 years.

CURIOUS EPITAPH

In the small modern churchyard at Luton, near Bishopsteignton, co. Devon, the following inscription has been placed to the memory of James WINSER, d. 1876, May 11, aged 84:—

"Beneath this fir tree rising to the skies,
The planter of it, old James WINSER lies.
The time shall come when the fir tree will fall
And old James WINSER rise above it all."

The fir tree is still (1912) growing and now forms a charming object in the landscape.
Hic JACET.

Boulogne-sur-mer.
le Mai 1853.

Le Maire de la ville de Boulogne-sur-Mer.
À Monsieur Hamilton, Consul de Sa Majesté Britannique à Boulogne.
Monsieur le Consul,

Aux termes du Règlement du Cimetière, toute concession temporaire doit être reprise par la Commune trois mois après l'expiration de la concession.

Un grand nombre de concessions de cet ordre, placés dans la zone protestante consacrée aujourd'hui aux concessions perpétuelles, ont dépassé depuis plus ou moins de temps le dernier terme de délai qui devait leur être accordé.

L'administration serait donc en droit de faire disparaître les signes funéraires des tombes dont il s'agit, mais, mue par le désir de venir en aide aux sentiments pieux des familles, et considérant que, parmi celles-ci, un certain nombre pourrait désirer transformer sur place en concessions perpétuelles, celles temporaires maintenant expirées, elle vient vous prier de vouloir bien faire les démarches nécessaires pour prévenir dans les six mois de ce jour les parents des décédés, dont les noms se trouvent au tableau que j'ai l'honneur de vous faire parvenir.

Il reste donc bien entendu, que l'administration considérera comme pouvant être immédiatement démolies, les tombes pour les quelles aucune concession perpétuelle n'aura été prise par votre intermédiaire dans les six mois qui vont courir à partir de ce jour.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur le Consul, l'expression de ma considération distinguée.

L'adjoind délégué du Maire,

D. JORDAN.

PITMAN OF WOODBRIDGE Co. SUFFOLK

By H. A. PITMAN.

AN oft quoted letter of Horace WALPOLE is that in which he writes: "I am the first antiquary of my race—people don't know how entertaining a study it is. Who begot whom is a most amusing kind of hunting; one recovers a grandfather instead of breaking one's own neck: and then one grows so pious to the memory of a thousand persons one never heard of before. One finds how Christian names come into a family, with a world of other delectable erudition."

In the same letter he asks his friend, COLE, "Pray can you tell me anything of some relatives of my own, the BURWELLS? My grandfather married Sir Jeffery BURWELL's daughter, of Rougham in Suffolk. Sir Jeffery's mother, I imagine, was a daughter of a Jeffery PITMAN of Suffolk; at least I know there was such a man as the latter, and that we quarter the arms of Pitman, &c."

Sir Jeffery BURWELL married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas DEREHAUGH of Colston Hall, Suffolk, and the Rev. William COLE evidently gave all the information required in that direction, as in a subsequent letter dated 14 Dec., 1775, WALPOLE writes thanking him for his present of a whole branch of most reputable ancestors, the DEREHAUGHS, who "alone would make gentlemen of half the modern peers, English and Irish"—but there is no further reference to the PITMANS.

Jeffery PITMAN was the son of William, who in his will, proved in 1590 (P.C.C. 43 Drury), is described as "the elder of Woodbridge, Suffolk, yeoman."

William died possessed of considerable property in Woodbridge, Martlesham, and Little Bealings.

He left a widow, Margaret, and three sons—William, the eldest, inherited certain houses and a candle-making business.

Jeffery, the second son, was left a tenement in Woodbridge called Haselton and some meadows in Milton.

And Edmond, the youngest, some lands in Charfield.

Jeffery who was born in 1560, is said to have been a tanner by trade, and became high sheriff of Suffolk.

In 1619, he bought the manor of Alford from B. BARKER, which, on his death in 1627, passed to his grandson, Jeffery BURWELL, who sold it to Henry Wood. His will, which is a somewhat lengthy document, is recorded in Somerset House (P.C.C. 68 Skinner) and mentions his second wife, Ann; his daughter, Mary, wife of Edmund BURWELL and their children; his daughter, Avis, wife of William ALSTON; his nephew, William, son of late brother William; his niece, daughter of his brother Edmond; and some relations of his two wives and friends to whom he leaves rings, &c.

The widow, Ann, died in 1637, and by her will (P.C.C. 136 Goare) leaves inter alia her $\frac{1}{2}$ share of the ship called "Hopewell," ★ to her sister, Anne MARSHALL and ★ between her sisters, Robetta CHILD and Christian WEYMAN.

In the Church of Woodbridge there is a large monument against the wall, to Jeffery PITMAN and his family. It is handsomely decorated in gold and colours, and consists of three series of niches, containing figures and inscriptions, and bearing the PITMAN arms: gules, two pole-axes in saltire between four mullets or. of which a description will be found in the Topographer and Genealogist, vol. ii, and the New Suffolk Traveller and other works.

His two sons, William and Jeffery, who were students of Gray's Inn, died vita patris unmarried and his daughters, Mary and Avis, were left co-heiresses.

The following Pedigree shows the descent to Horace WALPOLE, etc.

PITMAN OF WOODBRIDGE

A BOOK OF FAMILY PORTRAITS

CONTRIBUTED BY HENRY BODDINGTON, J.P., F.S.G.

HANNAH WAKEMAN AND SARAH COLLIER.

OUR next portraits are of Hannah BODDINGTON, afterwards Mrs. WAKEMAN (1679-1714) and Sarah BODDINGTON, afterwards Mrs. COLLIER (1690-1743), daughters and 5th and 12th children respectively of George BODDINGTON of St. Margaret's, Lothbury, London, Turkey merchant, and M.P. for Andover (1646-1719) and Hannah (COPE, formerly VENNING) his wife, whose maiden name is unknown. This is very odd as she was the wife of the Revd. Ralph VENNING, M.A., of Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

Hannah, the strong-featured, with almost a man's face, was born 25 Nov. 1679. She married, by Vicar-General's licence, 15 April 1701, Robert WAKEMAN, Consulat Cyprus, who died 9 March 1708. She died 2 June 1714, and was buried at St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, London. Her will, dated 7 January 1713/4, was proved 30 June 1714; a brief record enough—thirty-five years.

Her sister Sarah, the subject of the larger portrait and twelfth of her parents' fourteen children, was born 16 September 1690, and married on the 22 Feb. 1710/11 at Great St. Helen's Church, Ebenezer COLLIER, "gent." With a slightly longer record (fifty-three years) she survived her husband twenty years, died 26 March 1743, and was buried at Bunhill Fields, the famous Nonconformist burial-ground. Her will was proved four days after, on the 30 March. Both sisters left issue.

The larger portrait is inscribed "Sarah COLLIER, 1709," but that is not quite the fact, for in 1709 she was Sarah BODDINGTON. It shows that the portrait is that of a girl of eighteen or nineteen, and suggests the possibility that the drawing was not taken straight from life, but from another portrait. To the writer's eye it looks rather like a copy from a painting in oils, but that is pure surmise.

Ebenezer COLLIER was fifth son of Henry COLLIER of Whitechapel, "gent.," a clerk in Chancery. The eldest son of Ebenezer COLLIER and Sarah was George COLLIER, born 18 December 1711, whose wife is referred to in his mother's will, but not by name. He was a man of no profession, went to America and died there. His eldest son was Admiral Sir George COLLIER, born 15 May 1732, Vice-Admiral of the Blue, knighted 27 Jan. 1775; M.P. for Honiton, 1784; died 6 April 1795, and was buried in Marylebone Parish Church, where there is (or was) an inscription to his memory.

EVIDENCE FROM COFFIN-PLATES

By "HIC JACET."

THE scope of THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST is so wide that it includes not only records inscribed on parchment or paper, but those preserved on stone or brass or in other ways; carvings in wood, stitches in samplers, engravings on seals, how numerous are the voices which speak to us from the past! It is natural to expect, therefore, that readers may be interested in a short statement as to the use which can be made of the inscription on a coffin-plate in legal proceedings.

The rule that a written document must speak for itself has an exception in cases where the production of the document is found to be impossible or even highly inconvenient. It is therefore not surprising to find that the copy of a coffin-plate inscription has been admitted as evidence in several pedigree cases, among these being the CHANDOS Peerage (1791), the ROKEBY Peerage (1830) and the LOVAT Peerage (1826).

The matter may perhaps become clearer to the reader if the details of one of the above-mentioned peerage cases are set before him on this point. When the LOVAT Peerage case was before the House of Lords Committee in 1826 the following conversation is reported to have taken place between Counsel and a Witness, Mr ANDERSON, a Writer to the Signet:

"What have you in your hand?—Copies of Inscriptions in the Tombs in the Parish of Kirk-hill.

"Did you examine the Inscriptions yourself?—Yes; I took them off the coffins.

"Are they correct copies of the Inscriptions?—They are.

"Are these coffins in the Family Burying-place?—They are in the Family Vault."

The paper containing the Inscriptions was then handed to the Committee and read. At the foot of the paper was the following note: "The above Inscriptions were this day taken by me in the presence of the Sexton from the Coffins in the Vault of the LOVAT Family in the old Church or Chapel of Kirk-Hill, Inverness-shire. . . .

"John ANDERSON, W.S."

It will be observed that these coffin-plates were found to be in their proper resting-places and that the witness called was the person who had made the copies.

For what period such inscriptions may be expected to retain their legibility is perhaps a matter for conjecture. Correspondence in Notes and Queries some years ago (1881) proved that a century and a half was not an impossible time; while an inscription made by copper nails driven into the coffin lid would last longer still.

ABSTRACTS OF DEEDS IN PRIVATE HANDS

QUERIES

28. LAMARE Family.—Wanted the present repository of two charters, one of Geoffrey de LAMARE, and the other of his son Robert de LAMARE, of about 1243 and 1248 respectively, by which they grant the advowson of the Church of Lamare to Titchfield Abbey, Hampshire. Any charters of this family would, however, be of interest. What arms were borne by the above?

Buckinghamshire Baptisms, Marriages and Burials, Vol. II (new series) Registers of Drayton Parslow. Edited by William BRADBROOK, transcribed by the Rev. C. F. CLARK, M.A. (London, Chas. A. BERNAU) 10s. 6d. net.

This volume, which contains all the entries in the registers from 1559 to 1837, also includes many quaint and interesting notes made between 1759 and 1769, by the Rev. John Lord, then rector of the parish, recording various items of local interest such as earthquakes, the appearance of a meteor, and the fact that he caught an eagle in his yard, etc. In this book, as in many other cases, it must have needed a certain amount of courage to put some of these items into print; of this, however, Dr BRADBROOK has no lack; and we are sure that other editors of Parish Registers might follow his example to some advantage.

Another feature of the volume is the introduction of a map of Drayton Parslow and district, the value of which to genealogists is very great, for in it can be seen at a glance all the surrounding parishes, any of which may contain the information required, if a search of this volume has not been successful. There are also plates of curious, and probably unique, water-colour drawings in the registers, of a baptism and a funeral under date 1785. The first volume contains the register of Aston Abbots, 1559–1837, and Edgcott, 1538–1837.

Gloucestershire Place-Names, by W. St Clair BADDELEY (Gloucester, John BELLOWES), 5s. net. This volume is a very valuable addition to the all-too-few lists of county place-names, and should find a place on the shelves of all interested in Gloucestershire, as well as those who follow the movements of the Romans in this country, for, as the Author tells us, there were no less than fifty Romano-British villas in the county, a fact which must have had an influence on local names.

This edition, which has been revised by Mr T. M. BLAGG will doubtless prove useful to the novice, as it contains many hints of great value to beginners. Undoubtedly the most valuable part of this little book, to genealogists of every grade, is the revised date table, 1066–1914.

MARCH, 1914.

AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY LONDON BOARDING SCHOOL

BY SIR THOMAS H. C. TROUBRIDGE, Bt., F.S.G.

IN the early part of the reign of George I, a certain Mrs Louisa JARRY and her daughter, Louisa CHARDELLON, kept a boarding school for young ladies in Marylebone, in those days quite on the outskirts of London. In the course of a search at the Record Office for some information about an ancestress of mine I came across a suit (Chancery Proceedings, Bundle 810—PRICE v. GORDON, and PRICE v. WRIGHT) some details of which are instructive in throwing light on the manners and customs of that day, and which I have thought might interest and amuse your readers.

The lawsuit was brought by Mr PRICE, a coal merchant of Swallow Street, near Oxford Road (apparently Swallow Street, Piccadilly), against Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY to recover £80 owing for coals supplied to the boarding house from 1748 to 1754.

Now there was as a pupil at the boarding school a certain Miss Charlotte WRIGHT who was placed there apparently by her mother, Mrs Jane WRIGHT, in 1746. Charlotte was a "whole" boarder and the annual charge for such, to be "Boarded, Schooled and Educated" was £20. She was at the school for three years and a quarter, at the end of which time she left, and there was owing for her schooling £65, of which Mrs WRIGHT paid to Mrs CHARDELLON and Mrs JARRY £25, leaving £40 still owing—and during the time she was at school, by Mrs WRIGHT's authority, they bought clothes and other necessaries for her daughter, and on that account they received five guineas, and there was £3 still owing, making a total of £43 due. This debt Mrs CHARDELLON and Mrs JARRY made over to Mr PRICE as part of the £80 they owed him for coals, and, in course of trying to get it, the action of PRICE v. GORDON was entered upon. Charlotte WRIGHT having first married, at the age of sixteen, Colonel TERRILL of Barbados, he died shortly afterwards, and at eighteen she married secondly Mr Robert GORDON. Mr PRICE apparently thought that Mrs GORDON should be responsible for her own schooling on the strength of a letter written by her, and so sued Mr GORDON as her guardian, she being his wife and a minor. I will let the Bill filed by Mr PRICE, and the various answers and depositions in the case speak for themselves—they are as follows:

Chancery Proceedings, 1758–1800.

810.

PRICE v. GORDON.

29th April 1755.

John PRICE of the Parish of St. James within the Liberty of Westminster, co. Middlesex, coal merchant, files a Bill of Complaint:

That on the 28th March 1746 Jane WRIGHT, then wife of Robert WRIGHT of (blank) Middlesex, Esq., but now his widow, placed and put out Charlotte GORDON (then Charlotte WRIGHT) her daughter to board, be brought up, schooled and educated at the Boarding School of Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY, both then of the Parish of St. Mary le Bone, Middlesex, school mistresses, at the annual sum of £20. The said Charlotte WRIGHT continued as a boarder with them from that date till 29th June 1749, for which time there became due to Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY the sum of £65, and they received from Jane WRIGHT or by her order £25 on account, so that £40 still remains owing, and during the time when she was at school by Jane WRIGHT's authority they bought clothes and other necessaries for her said daughter, and on that account they received from Jane WRIGHT 5 guineas and now £3 still remains due thereon which makes a total of £43 due, and Jane WRIGHT has been frequently applied to for it and though she has frequently promised to settle the account she has not yet done so. And particularly in April 1754, they employed Mr Barber their Attorney to write to her about the said debt and she replied enclosing a letter addressed to Mrs CHARDELLON as follows:

"Cowes,

"4th May 1754.

"Madam,

"I received a letter from Mr Barber by the last post acquainting me he had orders from you to bring an action against me for the board &c. of my daughter at which I was much surprized as you took Mr WRIGHT for your paymaster in his life time and your only remedy would be against his effects but as my daughter has been married and been a widow about four months and very well able to pay herself she desires me to lett you (? know) and also wrote herself that she has no intention of putting you to that trouble and had you not applied to an attorney about it she designed to have satisfied you your just demands upon her as soon as she had heard from Barbadoes (of which place her husband Colonel TERRILL was) and settled her affairs. If you think proper to wait till then which will be the latter end of September next and there is a daughter of Colonel TERRILL's by a former wife which she may may (sic) very probably have it in her power to recommend to you you'll please to send your account to me and in the mean time I will look out your receipts that it may be settled,

"I am, Madam,

"Your humble servant,

"J. WRIGHT.

"Please to turn over."

And on the other side of the sheet is wrote in the handwriting of the said Charlotte GORDON (then Charlotte TERRILL) the widow of the said Colonel TERRILL in the said letter named, who hath lately married Robert GORDON of Trotton House near Midhurst, Sussex, Esq., the following words:

"Madam,

"My Mamma has informed you by her letter of my just intention and I should be glad to see your account which as soon as possible I shall be very glad to settle and pay the balance,

"I am,

"Your obliged servant,

"Charlotte TERRILL."

Which said letter your Orator has left with his Clerk in Court for the said Defendant's perusal.

Further in January 1754 Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY became indebted to your Orator for coals sold to them to the value of £80 os. 4d., and Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY being willing and desirous of securing part of the said £80 os. 4d. to your Orator executed a Deed Poll dated 3rd June 1754 reciting that they were justly indebted unto your Orator in the said sum for coals delivered, and also reciting Jane WRIGHT of Cowes, widow, was justly indebted to them in the sum of £43. They transferred to your said Orator the said debt of £43 and appointed your said Orator their Attorney to demand or sue for it, undertaking that they would not themselves release the debt.

Your said Orator hath frequently applied to Jane WRIGHT for the £43 and she hath frequently promised to pay him.

When your Orator advised Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY of Jane WRIGHT's not paying the debt they handed him the above recited letters, and your Orator has frequently applied to the said Charlotte and Robert GORDON, the said Robert being a gentleman of large fortune, but they decline to pay any part of it.

Your Orator claims that Jane WRIGHT, Robert GORDON, Charlotte GORDON, Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY have confederated together to defraud him.

Jane WRIGHT gives out that she is not accountable as she did not put her daughter to school except by the consent and direction of her said husband Robert WRIGHT. In May 1744 Jane WRIGHT separated from her husband Robert WRIGHT and during the separation Robert allowed her £100 to maintain her and her daughter, the reason the allowance was so high was that the daughter's education was to be paid out of it. Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY look upon Jane WRIGHT as the one who should pay them. Robert WRIGHT died intestate and insolvent and no person has taken out letters of administration. Further Jane WRIGHT has frequently promised to pay the £43 to Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY.

As evidence that Jane WRIGHT put her daughter to school with Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY, Jane WRIGHT wrote to Louisa JARRY under date, Portsmouth, 10th April 1746 a letter wherein amongst other things she says:

"I should esteem it as a particular favour if you would give yourself the trouble of informing me how Poor Charlotte [the said Charlotte GORDON] does as I am perfectly happy in putting her under your care well knowing you will not suffer her to want for anything. I hope she will behave in such a manner as to deserve your kindness," and your Orator hath left said letter with his Clerk in Court for Jane WRIGHT's perusal. And as further evidence she wrote another letter dated St. Philips, 11th July 1746 wherein she says:

"As you seem desirous to hear from me on my arrival in Barbadoes I take the first opportunity of acquainting you we arrived here safe the 17th of last month after 6 weeks passage from Plymouth where we put in 3 days after we had left Portsmouth from which place I wrote to lett you know I had left money in Mr BRINSDEN's hands to pay you a quarters board for Miss Charlotte [the said Charlotte GORDON] which I hope he has paid you long before this, as to the next quarter which will be the 28th September next which I reckon will be about the time this will reach you you'll please to call upon Mr MAXWELL, merchant, in Mincing Lane, to whom I have wrote to desire he would lett you have 10 guineas, 5 of which will be for the quarter and the other 5 will be towards paying for necessaries she may have occasion for particularly a new pair of stays which I desire she may have and which I would not have her want above all things. I hope she comes out well in her learning and behaves handsomely which I desire you will be so good as to lett me hear by the first Packett that will sett out for these parts putting the letter in the Post Office every last Saturday in the month and paying postage which you'll place to the account as I think it is proper she should learn to dance be pleased to lett her begin as soon as the Christmas Holydays are over. Captain CLARK who I came over with has promised to go to see her I beg the favour of you to show him all the civility I am sensible you are capable of"

which said letter your Orator hath likewise left with his Clerk in Court for the said Jane WRIGHT's inspection.

Jane WRIGHT now pretends that she never made your Orator or Louisa CHARDELLON or Louisa JARRY any promise to pay or if she did it was before she had had advice and therefore she is not obliged to perform the said promise.

Jane WRIGHT's said daughter by the good education which she had received was greatly improved insomuch that she married very happily and by means thereof is possessed of considerable fortune.

Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY pretend that they did not transfer any debt to your Orator and Jane WRIGHT pretends that if she pays the debt she will pay it to Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY.

Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY refuse to allow your Orator to make use of their names in endeavouring to recover the debt.

Charlotte GORDON pretends that her mother and she never wrote any such letters or that if she wrote the one attributed to her it was under her mother's compulsion and she was under age at the time. She pretends that she is not able to pay such a large sum as £43 but her letter says that she was fully sensible of her obligations.

He prays that a writ be directed against Jane WRIGHT, Robert GORDON, Charlotte GORDON, Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY.

James IFOLDE and Thomas PEACE being two of the Commissioners in connection with the case assign Robert GORDON, Esq., to be the guardian of his infant wife, the 6th June 1757.

On the 8th July 1757 Robert GORDON, Esq., and Charlotte his wife answer as follows:

They admit that Jane Wright put Charlotte to school at about the time mentioned and that she continued there as a boarder except for about 3 or 4 months when she was absent being kept away by her mother on account of illness. If no deduction be made for that time they admit that the sum of £65 was due, they believe it to be true that Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY received payments on account also that Jane WRIGHT authorised purchase of clothes and other necessaries agreeing to pay for the same but how much was spent by Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY on this account she does not know for the Defendant Charlotte GORDON was only about 9 years old when she went to school and about 12 years when she left. These Defendants have not seen the letters which are in the hands of the Plaintiff's Clerk in Court for they live at Trotton near Midhurst in the county of Sussex about 40 miles distant from London and they don't see why they should make a journey to London to inspect the same.

At about the date of the said letter this Deft. Charlotte GORDON was the widow of Joseph TERRILL, Esq., and she resided with her mother at Cowes in the Isle of Wight and the endorsement of the said letter was written by the direction and under the influence of the said Jane WRIGHT who stood by this Deft. while she wrote it and dictated the same to her. These Defts. believe she did this to exonerate herself of the said debt and to make this Defendant Charlotte GORDON liable, but as she was then only 17 years old and never received any fortune from her father or mother and as her mother now enjoys an estate of over £400 per annum in Barbadoes which was the estate of her late brother deceased, John PRICE, Esq., and the Defendant enjoyed the said estate for several years while the daughter was at school during the lunacy of the said John PRICE, who lived under her care and management. A commission of Lunacy was issued against him in 1749. In several affidavits which Jane WRIGHT made at that time when applying to the Lord High Chancellor for the appointing of a Committee she stated that she not only maintained and clothed the said John PRICE but had likewise supported herself and brought up and educated her daughter, this Deft. Charlotte in a genteel manner without any assistance from the said Robert WRIGHT her husband, except only the sum of £10.

The Lord High Chancellor's order was dated 21st December 1749 whereby James Innes the said Jane WRIGHT's own solicitor, at her nomination was appointed Committee of the personal estate of the said John PRICE the lunatic, and John PRICE lived with her until the time of his death and a more liberal allowance was made to Jane WRIGHT out of the said lunatic's estate with a view to the better support and maintenance of herself and this Defendant Charlotte as her husband from whom she lived separated had made her no allowance for several years. Further these Defendants consider that Jane WRIGHT ought to pay the unsatisfied totalings of the said schooling. These Defendants are entire strangers to the dealings between the Complainant and Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY and know nothing of the Deed Poll mentioned. When this Defendant Charlotte was at school her mother was well able to pay for her schooling. The daughter never received any fortune from either her father or her mother and therefore the Complainant should look to Jane WRIGHT for payment as she is in opulent circumstances. These Defendants admit that at the time the daughter wrote the letter, under the influence of her mother, the said daughter was entitled to an annuity of £300 a year by virtue of her marriage settlement with John TERRILL. These Defendants also admit that Robert GORDON is a person of good fortune but they deny that they are liable for the debt.

5th July 1755.

The Answer of Jane WRIGHT.

She acknowledges that at about the time in the Bill mentioned she put her daughter Charlotte WRIGHT to be educated at the school of Louisa CHARDELLON (then Louisa JARRY) and her mother Louisa JARRY, giving a promise or some such undertaking that they would be paid, and she continued at school until the 24th June 1749 except for three or four months when she was kept away on account of illness as appears by a letter, which this Defendant has, addressed by Louisa CHARDELLON (then Louisa JARRY) to Robert WRIGHT, this Defendant's late husband. This Defendant admits that the plaintiffs are entitled to £20 per annum for board when her daughter was at school, but she denies that this amounts to £65 as she had paid them, or one of them the following sums, on the 26th March 1746, £4 4s., on the 13th January following, £10, on the 16th April 1748, 16 guineas as well as 10 guineas paid by the order of this Defendant by Messrs. MAXWELL and LASCELLES, merchants in London, totaling £41 10s. She admits that the Plaintiffs may have expended some small sums of money in buying necessaries but these must have been very small and, even reckoning according to the Bill of Complaint, only total £3, but this Defendant's undertaking to provide her daughter with necessaries was merely voluntary, and she does not feel herself liable for the schooling and education or for the necessaries.

During the whole time that the daughter was at school this Deft. was the wife of Robert WRIGHT who was then and continued to be until the date of his death one of the Coroners for the County of Middlesex, and an Attorney at Law, as well as a Solicitor of the High Court of Chancery, by means of which several employments and professions he was well enough off to provide for the education of his daughter.

During the time his said daughter was at school he kept a house in Rathbone Place not very far from the same school, and lived there in a genteel manner.

Since the beginning of the year 1740 this Deft. lived separate from her husband and never had a separate allowance which is alleged, except the sum of £10, and if this Defendant had not been supported by her own relations she would have wanted the common necessities of life.

Louisa CHARDELLON and Louisa JARRY well knew her incapacity to pay for her daughter's education, and while her said daughter was at school they looked to her husband for payment. And this Deft. thinks that the various sums mentioned above should be repaid to her out of the estate of her said husband.

She thinks that this suit was brought against her on the instigation of her daughter, who is endeavouring in this way to get free from her own liabilities.

She denies that she ever promised, after the death of her husband, to satisfy the demands of the Complainant of Louisa CHARDELLON or Louisa JARRY.

When Mr BARBER the Attorney wrote to her this Defendant denied all liability, and this Defendant says that the education of her said daughter at the said school was not so extraordinary as the Complainant by his Bill insinuates. Her daughter was not married until about 4 years after she had left the school.

26th April 1757.

The Answer of Louisa JARRY.

She states that Louisa CHARDELLON, mentioned in the Bill, has lately died at Mary le Bone.

This Deft. desired one Mr MILLER to employ an Attorney to write to Jane WRIGHT, and Mr BARBER an Attorney did so write.

She looked upon Jane WRIGHT as the one who should pay and not her husband as their paymaster. She admits practically everything in the Bill of Complaint except that she denies that she has pretended the said debt of £43 was never assigned to the Complainant.

16th February 1757.

The further Answer of Jane WRIGHT.

She says that the endorsement written by her daughter on her letter to

LOUISA CHARDELLON, which she sent to Mr BARBER, was written by her own free will and that her daughter was then aged between 17 and 18 years, a widow, and possessed of a jointure of £300, nor was the said Charlotte GORDON of the temper and disposition to be compelled by this Deft. or any other person to do an act of that nature against her own will and inclination.

This Deft. separated from her husband on account of the hard and cruel treatment she had received from him. And this Deft. has in her possession a letter from LOUISA JARRY in which she applies to her husband for payment, worded as follows:

" Sir,

" I never was so surprised at anything as at Mrs WRIGHT's saying she did not know what I ment by the bill I delivered you and that she owed me but little having the receipts to show. I therefore Sir, insist upon her showing them to you and that as soon as possible for I think I have a great deal of patiance to wait so long for it. I would have her to know I should scorn to ask of anyone more than my due. Miss came to board with us in the year 1746, the 28th of March; and as been with us till the 24th June 1749 witch makes 3 years and a quarter at £20 a year amounts to 65 pounds of witch I have received 25 pounds in 3 payments the first was one quarter by the hands of Mr Maxwell a merchant in Mincing Lane then Mrs WRIGHT on her return from Barbadoes paid me half a year at Xmas and in March 1748 she paid me another alf year. I have not received anything since that Sir is the truth you was so kind to tell me that you would see me paid and the Masters as last month I waited with patiance but not hearing from you I took the liberty to send to you because there is quarter day a coming and we must pay our rent please Sir be so good as to see me paid this week or the next at latest I shall meet Mrs WRIGHT when you are pleased to apoint the day I am nither affraid or asham'd to meet her having never done anything beneath a gentle woman tho she as not behav'd to me as such be pleased Sir to let me hear from you as soon as possible my mother joins in compliments with me wo Sir your huble servant,

" Louisa JARRY."

which said letter is directed on the outside to Mr Robert WRIGHT in Rathbone Place, London.

This Deft. says that Robert GORDON is reputed to be a man of very large fortune and keeps an equipage and great number of servants and lives in a very plentiful manner.

To further prove that Charlotte WRIGHT had been at the Boarding School, Mr PRICE no doubt on the advice of Mrs CHARDELLON and Mrs JARRY, called as a witness another former boarder—Mrs Elizabeth TROUBRIDGE—whose evidence was as follows. He also put in proof that Mr Robert WRIGHT, husband of Mrs WRIGHT, formerly of Rathbone Place, had died in the Fleet Prison insolvent and intestate.

Witnesses examined by Edward WORTHEY Esq. one of the Examiners in the High Court of Chancery in a Certain Cause now Depending in the said Court between John PRICE Complainant and Robert GORDON and Charlotte his wife Jane WRIGHT widow the mother of the said Charlotte and Louisa JARRY Defendants on the part and behalf of the Complainant.

(sgd.) P. DAVIES.

Some comments occur to me in reading the case, for instance, it seems rather strange that anyone who could write the letter addressed to Mr Robert WRIGHT and signed Louisa JARRY, should set up as a schoolmistress; let us hope that her general knowledge was greater than her powers of expressing it. Anyhow let us trust she got paid her money eventually by some one.

It is a strange coincidence that John PRICE the coal merchant had the same name as Mrs WRIGHT's brother.

It would also appear from the case that it was not unusual for a girl to be a "whole" boarder at a Boarding School, although she lived close by. It does not seem quite clear whether Louisa CHARDELLON was the Mother of Louisa JARRY or vice versa. Mrs WRIGHT says Louisa JARRY was the mother, whilst Mrs TROUBRIDGE says that Louisa CHARDELLON was.

Mrs Elizabeth TROUBRIDGE who gave evidence was the wife of Richard TROUBRIDGE of Cavendish Street, and mother of my great-grandfather, afterwards Admiral Sir Thomas TROUBRIDGE, Bart., one of Nelson's "band of brothers." She was before her marriage Miss Elizabeth SQUINCH and I should be very glad of any information as to her parentage, or where she came from. Richard TROUBRIDGE died in 1760 and she married, secondly, Henry SMITH in 1761. He died and she married, thirdly, Henry FREAME of Northumberland Street, and died in Marylebone in 1793, aged 60. She seems to have been rather a strange sort of woman. When her first husband died her son was about two years old. The following year she married Mr SMITH. The boy went to St. Paul's School in 1768, but it does not appear that she had anything to do with his being sent there. He went to sea in 1773 in H.M.S. "Seahorse" and fought in the East Indies under Sir Edward HUGHES—returning in 1783 a Post Captain. In 1784 he married at St. Martin's in the Fields, his mother living in Marylebone at the time, and only fifty years of age, and yet when he was created a Baronet in 1799, he wrote a letter to the Garter King-at-Arms, and stated that he did not know what his mother's cause was but thought she had remarried after his father's death, but did not know to whom, and was not aware if she was then alive or dead.

I have never heard of there being any quarrel between them, so possibly she did not know that he had entered the Navy, and therefore did not realize that the rising young naval captain was her own son.

ARMORIAL BEARINGS IN CHURCHES

By P. J. KING.

RESUMING my notes on Armorial Bearings in churches, another Cambridgeshire church having some interesting shields of families who have borne a prominent part in the history of our country is Bottisham, which, in passing, may be mentioned as one of the finest decorated churches in the county, possessing many notable architectural features. An influential family who were Lords of a number of manors including Exning and Newmarket, formerly resided here, viz. ALINGTON, whilst their arms "sa. a bend engrailed between six billets," I have met with in the churches of Stoke-by-Neyland, Suffolk; East Ham, Essex; Furneaux Pelham, Herts; and Horseheath, Cambridgeshire, through their marriages with the families of MANNOCKS, BREAME, NEWPORT and ARGENTINE respectively. By the marriage in 1682 of William ALINGTON with Elizabeth, heiress of John ARGENTINE, he became possessed of the Manor of Wymondeley, co. Cambridge, by grand serjeanty, i.e. to serve the King at his coronation with a silver cup, thus quartering the ARGENTINE arms "gu. three covered cups, arg." There were three Giles ALINGTONS, all of whom were knighted, one becoming Baron KILLARD in 1642, also retaining the title of Lord ALINGTON. This title became extinct on the death of Giles Lord ALINGTON, a minor, at Eton, while that of KILLARD was revived in Hildebrand Lord ALINGTON, his uncle and last male of the family, who was buried at Wethersfield, Suffolk. Mary, daughter and heiress of Sir Richard GARDINER, Lord Mayor of London, married Sir Giles ALINGTON in 1521, hence the GARDINER arms. In the ALINGTON chapel are several quaint monuments, one dated 1540 being to Robert ALINGTON who married Mary, daughter of William CONINGSBY of Kings Lynn, she afterwards marrying Thomas PLEDGER whose extensive charities are in evidence.

Over this monument are three shields, the first for PLEDGER—"sa. a fess engr: between three bucks trippant or." The second, being over the wife's head contains ten coats, six on the sinister side, and four on the dexter; the six are as follows: 1. ALINGTON, 2. ARGENTINE, 3. "az. five eagles displayed, or. one three and one, a canton, ermine," for Fitz TEK or TECON, 4. "gu. on a bend, arg. three leopards faces, sa." for BURGH, 5. "per fess, arg. and sa. a pale counterchanged, three griffin's heads erased, or." for GARDINER, 6. "arg. fretty, sa. a canton of the last," for MIDDLETON (Sir Giles married Alice, daughter and heiress of John MIDDLETON). The impalement being—1. and 4. “gu. three conies, sejeant, within a bordure engr. arg.” for CONINGSBY, 2. “or. a lion ramp, gu.” for STRECHE, 3. “sa. a fess, erm. between three goats heads erased, of the second,” for FERBY or FERIBY. (Sir Humphrey CONINGSBY, Kt. and judge, married the daughter and heiress of — FERIBY of Lincolnshire.)

Over the figure of Thomas PLEDGER are the arms of PLEDGER impaling the four last for CONINGSBY. The other shields and monuments are to the JENYNS' family. Sir Roger JENYNS (1663-1740) and his wife, a daughter of Sir Peter SOAME of Heydon in Essex, Bart. a descendant of Sir Stephen SOAME, Kt., Lord Mayor of London in 1598, Sir Roger JENYNS was knighted in 1700 for his services in connection with the drainage of the great Bedford level of the Fens, in which his ancestors had also been interested from an early period.

Over the monument are the arms “arg. on a fess, gu. three bezants on a canton, az. a crescent, or.” for JENYNS. Impaling “gu. a chevron, between three mallets, or.” for SOAME, above is the crest—a demi lion rampart, or. supporting a spear erect of the first, headed az., motto “Ignavis nunquam.” At one time there hung from the wall the same arms, in streamers and pennons with helmet, gauntlets, mantle and sword. Near this tomb is a marble tablet to Soame JENYNS (1703-1787), son of Sir Roger, who was M.P. for Cambridge County and Town for thirty-eight years; he was also a noted writer on many subjects (Vide Literary Biographies).

Other hatchments in the church have the arms of JENYNS, impaling “Erminois, a fess of four lozenges, vert. on a chief, az. an annulet between two suns, or.” for HEBERDEN, the Rev. George Leonard JENYNS (1763-1848) having married a daughter of the celebrated Court Physician of that name.

The handsome east window was erected to the memory of Colonel Soame JENYNS, one of the immortal “Six Hundred” at Balaclava. This family is connected with the famous Sarah JENNINGS, first Duchess of Marlborough.

In the church is a fine matrix of a brass dated 1291, to Elias de BECKINGHAM, “one of the three upright Judges” in the reign of Edward I.

The church of the adjoining village of Little Wilbraham has four shields elaborately carved on the old oak door and evidently commemorate donors; the first is “arg. on a fess dancette, sa. three bezants,” for BURGH, the second “or. on a fess between two chevrons, sa.” for Sir John de LISLE, who was Lord of the Manor of Wilbraham, and one of the Knights Founders of the most noble order of the Garter. The others would appear to represent the arms of TREVANNION and CLAYTON, the latter is given by some authorities, though on careful inspection the arms are a “cross engrailed between four trefoils slipped.”

Inside the church is a modern shield “sa. a trefoil slipped, between eight mullets, arg.” for PHIPPS, impaling “sa. a lion ramp. between three crosses crosslets, or.” for KING.

By EDWARD P. STAPLETON.

THAT the present family of BULTEEL is descended from James BULTEEL of Tournai who lived in the sixteenth century, there can be little doubt.

The tracing of this descent has proved a stumbling block both to PRINCE in his Worthies of Devon (Edition 1810), and to AGNEW in his Protestant Exiles from France, according to the Visitation of London 1633/4. The above James was the father of Giles BULTEEL (buried at St Mary's, Woolnott, 7 May 1603) who had three sons.

1. James, whom I hope to prove was the ancestor of the Devonshire branch.
2. John, Huguenot minister at Canterbury.
3. Peter, merchant in London, who had several sons, the third son being James, from whom, both PRINCE and AGNEW think that the Devonshire branch is sprung.

The best proof of my contention that the elder James is the ancestor of the Devonshire BULTELS, is the dates of the two James.

James BULTEEL the elder, the eldest son, according to all sources, of Giles BULTEEL, married 26 October 1613 at Barnstable, co. Devon, Julian daughter of John PEARD. He died in London and his will, proved in the P.C.C. 30 October 1632 (Audley 104), mentions his son Samuel (born at Barnstable 5 May 1616), who was the direct ancestor of the Devonshire Family of BULTEEL.

The fact that Samuel BULTEEL was the son of James and the ancestor of the Devonshire BULTEELS is acknowledged both by PRINCE and AGNEW.

Now we will consider the claims of James BULTEEL the younger.

James the younger's father was Peter BULTEEL who married 29 January 1611 Ester HERBERT, daughter of the late Hugh HERBERT of Norwich.

James his third son could not therefore have been born before 1614, but according to the Barnstable registers it is known that in 1613 James BULTEEL married Julian PEARD:

This fact alone I consider sufficient to prove that the elder James BULTEEL, the eldest son of Giles, was the ancestor of the BULTEELS of Devonshire.

THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST

Edited by RICHARD HOLWORTHY, F.S.G.

VOL. I, No. 15.

MAY, 1914.

JEREMY COLLIER, A.M.

By HENRY CURTIS.

IN a former issue of the BRITISH ARCHIVIST, (part 10 pp. 77-78) an account was given of the memorials existing in Stow Qui Church, co. Cambridge, and though the famous Non-Juror, Jeremy COLLIER (1650-1726) is mentioned as having been born there, no statement is made as to the existence of any memorial to him, or record of his arms.

These arms, a cross pattée fitchée at the foot (surmounted by a crescent indicating him to be the second son of the first house of the name), are shown in the well-known portrait engraved by R. WHITE in 1701. The Biographia Britannica, Vol. II, 1748, supplies first-hand information which would seem to be of sufficient interest for rescue from the limbo of obscurity.

"Jeremy COLLIER, son of Jeremy COLLIER, was born at Stow Qui, or Quire, in Cambridgeshire, Sept. 23rd 1650.

"His father was a Divine and considerable Linguist, and sometime Master of the free school at Ipswich in the county of Suffolk.

"His grandfather likewise was a clergyman, settled at Bradford in Yorkshire, where he lived in esteem for his function. He was born at Yeadon, near Bradford, and descended from a gentleman's family of that name, seated at Thrusk (Thirsk), in the same county, in the reign of Henry VIII.

"His mother was Elizabeth SMITH, of Qui in Cambridgeshire, where her family were possessed of a considerable interest, and related to the STERNES of that town, being by her mother descended from the KEYS or CAYS of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire.

"He was educated under his father at Ipswich, from whence he was sent to Cambridge, and admitted a poor Scholar of Caius-college, under the tuition of Mr John ELLYS. His admission bears date April 10, 1669, in the eighteenth year of his age. He took the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the year 1672-3, and that of Master of Arts in 1676, being ordained Deacon on September 24 the same year, by Dr. Peter GUNNING, Bishop of Ely, and Priest Feb. 24, 1677, by Dr. Henry COMPTON, Bishop of London. Having entered into Priests Orders, he officiated some time at the Countess Dowager of Dorset's, at Knowle in Kent, from whence he removed to a small rectory at Ampton, near St. Edmund's Bury in Kent, to which he was presented by James CALTHORPE, Esq.; and instituted by Dr. Anthony SPARROW, Bishop of Norwich, Sept. 25, 1679. After he had held this benefice six years, he resigned it and came to reside in London in 1685, and was, some little time after, made Lecturer at Gray's Inn. But the Revolution coming on, the publick exercise of his function became impracticable."

A note says, "Thus far this article was (except some dates) drawn up by Mr. COLLIER himself," the paragraph following being derived "from the information of a gentleman who was intimately acquainted with Mr. COLLIER." In the year 1713, he was consecrated a Bishop by Dr. George HIDUS, who was himself consecrated Suffragan of Thetford by the deprived Bishop of Norwich, Ely and Peterborough, Feb. 23, 1694. [In reference to this statement, however, it may be recalled that when Queen Anne's Government offered him valuable church preferment, "he, with a rare consistency, steadily declined"]".

The record continues: "As he grew in years that great share of health which he had enjoyed was interrupted by frequent attacks of the Stone, to which there is no doubt that his sedentary occupation might much contribute. . . . He lived, however, several years in an indifferent state of health, sometimes tolerably free, and at others grievously affected by his old distemper, which brought him to the grave April 26, 1726, and three days after his body was interred in the churchyard of St. Pancras. He was in the seventy-sixth year of his age and preserved the free uses of his senses to the very last.

"As to his character, we have already given it in the impartial history of his works, and shall therefore only add that his morals were unexceptionable, and that as his conduct had in it all the regularity becoming a Clergyman, so his behaviour had nothing stiff or pedantick, but all that life, spirit and innocent freedom, which constitutes the good breeding of a gentleman."

INDEXING: A PLAN FOR MARRIED WOMEN

CONSIDERING the good work which is being done by many learned men, often voluntarily, in indexing parish registers, as they are printed, it may seem greedy to ask for more. May one, however, inquire whether the marriages are sufficiently indexed in all cases? Should there not be a triple, instead of the usual double, entry? Take a concrete case, Edmund WOODE marries Mary DOWNE. This marriage is indexed under WOODE, Edmund, and also under DOWNE, Mary. What one asks for is an additional entry under WOODE, Mary (born DOWNE), so that Mary WOODE may be traced to the parish in question even though she be not buried there.

Perhaps some of the experts will deal with this point.

EXTRACT FROM A FAMILY BIBLE

James son of William and Margaret BURDWOOD was born at his father's house in St: Andrew's Street, Plymouth 4th Nov. 1744, and died on board His Majesty's ship "Port Mahon" on the 31 July, 1803. (of which ship he was purser) at the Bay of Honduras, of a violent fever, (after five days illness) brought into the Ship by some French prisoners taken out of a prize they captured on their way to Jamaica. He was buried at the town of Belize on the right of Captain Neville, and M^r Edmunds the Surgeon on the left, and all railed in with tombs over each separately. Nearly half the ship's company died including Captain Neville, M^r Edmunds the Surgeon, and several other officers. The "Port Mahon" sailed from Plymouth the 23rd May 1803, with dispatches for the West Indies and arrived at Barbadoes on the 29 June following. My Dear Son James BURDWOOD died on the 31 July 1803. My God make this a sanctified affliction for it is a great one. Behold he taketh away. Who can hinder him? Who can say unto him what doest Thou? The Lord's presence can make up to me the loss of all earthly enjoyments, and it is but a little while that I shall have to struggle with the things of time.

BOOKS RECEIVED

Fleetwood Family Records, Part I, collected and edited by R. W. Buss (privately printed for the Editor, 259 Holmesdale Road, South Norwood, London, S.E. Post free 3/1, abroad 3/6).

We wish every success to this valuable work for we feel that none is more capable of dealing with this family than the Editor, he having collected a vast amount of material about its various branches during his researches covering many years.

The first part gives a table showing the various branches of the family; some notes on the ancestry of the Fleetwoods, beginning with one Henry FLEETWOOD, lord of the Manor of Little Plumpton, temp. Edward III, and much other information. In the introduction the Editor mentions the richness of the family in literary and other associations, and how, through certain marriages, a curious link is formed between Cromwell, Milton and Pepys.

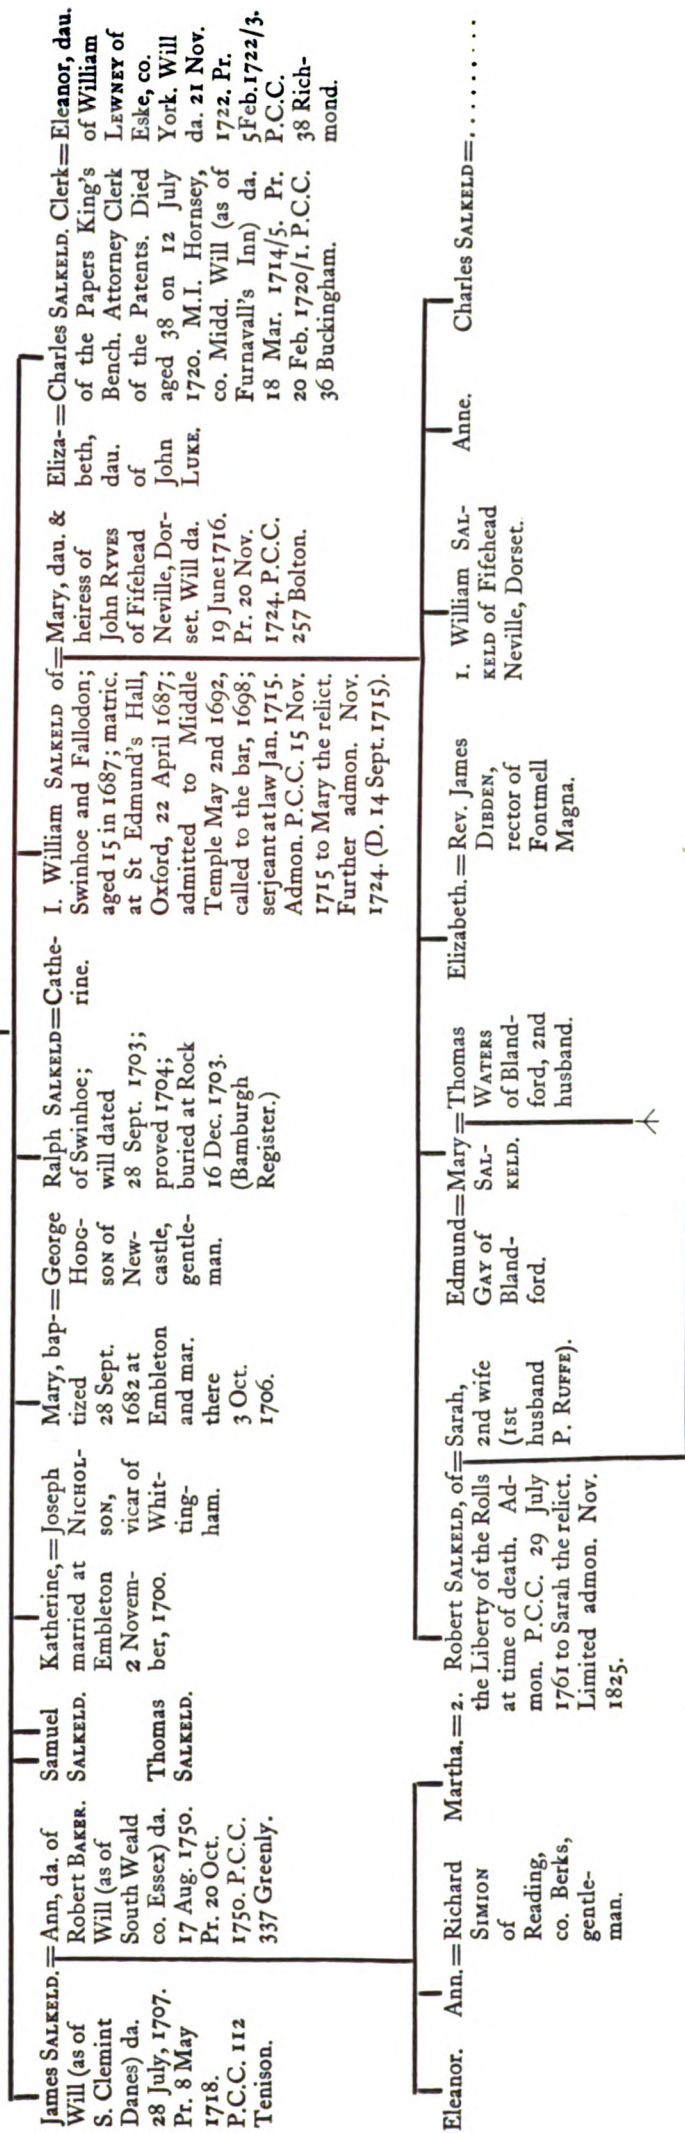

The work should certainly be popular, especially owing to the great number of people at the present day who descend from this old Lancashire family.

It is intended to publish this work in quarterly parts, provided sufficient subscribers are forthcoming; therefore all interested in this and kindred families should obtain a copy.

THE REV. JAMES BURDWOOD

NOTES FROM HIS NOTEBOOK

By ALAN R. BIRDWOOD

THE following is extracted from CALAMY's "Nonconformist Memorial."
List of evicted Ministers, 1662.

Dartmouth. St Petrox. (L) Mr James BURDWOOD of Pembroke College, Oxford. He was of an antient family which had an estate at Preston* in West Allington, near Kingsbridge; which hath been in the name of the BURDWOODS for many generations. He was born at Yarncombe in that Parish of religious parents, and had his grammar learning at Kingsbridge School. When he left the University he was for a while Minister at Plympton St Mary† near Plymouth. From thence he removed to Dartmouth at the invitation of the Magistrates of the Town, where he continued till the act of Uniformity ejected him. Having a wife and Children he set up a Latin School in Dartmouth, but was driven from thence by the 5 mile Act. Upon which he had some thoughts of going, with several of his brethren, to America, and sold his estate in order to it, but was prevented. He then rented an estate at Batson in the parish of Marlborough, saying often it was better for him and his to work than to be burdensome to others. There he staid 5 yeares & preached gratis in his own house, as long as he was permitted, to great numbers who flocked to hear him from the adjacent parts; and, when his house could not receive them, in his orchard. He met with some disturbance from Quakers of whom there were many in those parts. They came often into the meeting while he was preaching or praying, and when he had ended would wrangle and dispute with him.

He recovered some who were leaning to them, and confirmed others. But one BEER or BEAR (who had been for some time at the head of the informers, and now for his good service disturbing conventicles, was advanced to the degree of a Justice of the Peace), together with another Justice, the Parson of the Parish a very busy man, and a crew of informers who were at their back, occasioned him much trouble and vexation; unhung his doors, rifled his house, seized and carried away his goods, ripped off the locks of his barn doors and put others on, and forced his wife and children to take shelter among their neighbours. On Sept 11. 1670. a crew of informers & plunderers came to his house, where they found him with no more than four besides his own family, singing a Psalm. But some of the house opening the door to let in a dog who had set up on a girl passing by, the girl being affrighted got in too; and the informers at her heels. For this the worshipful New Justice proceeds to make a conviction for a conventicle, and levies £20 upon Mr BURDWOOD for preaching, £20 more for his house, and £5 a peice upon the rest. When the Justice himself used to go into the meeting with his train, they gave vent to their malice in abysive & reproachful language. The good man bore all these affronts with patience and cheerfulness taking joyfully the spoiling of his goods, praying God to pardon them. When he could stay no longer at Batson he removed to Hicks Down (Hex Down still exists as a farm), about a mile from Begbury, where he took another Farm. During his seven years residence here his old enemies gave him new trouble. One fine of £20 and another of £50 was set upon him and his hearers. A rude Company entered his house and went from room to room, seizing on all that he had within doors & without. Good security was offered if they would leave his live goods in his ground till the next morning, but it was not accepted. However the next day Lieutenant Colonel Waring "an acquaintance of his landlord came and freed all."

* Preston is now a farmhouse.—A.R.B.

† It should be Plympton St Morice.—A.R.B.

He kept on preaching after this as the times would bear, and at length returned to Dartmouth, where after a little respite of about three years, he again met with hard treatment, but had great respect and kindness shown him by Mr T. BOONE and his family. Being obliged to leave off house-keeping, Dr Richard BURTHOGGE who had a great value for him, and entertained him and his wife and some of his children at his house at Bowden near Totnes for almost two years. Towards the latter end of that term he was seized with a violent fit of the stone & strangury, which distempers hold him till the time of his death, tho with some intermissions. When he was a little recovered he returned once more to Dartmouth, where weakness and pains wholly took him off from public work. He bore his afflictions with admirable patience "acknowledging that they proceeded from a loving Father, that he deserved much worse at his hands. And that he hoped this would be all the hell he would have." He had a very chargeable time of it for years many, and yet he would often say "Hitherto I and mine have not wanted anything." Under very sad circumstances he expressed himself thus "I have lost estate, relations & health, and yet God is my God still. I am a broken vessel, fit for no work, but suffering, Lord I submit. This remarkable saying also (among several others) was often used by him "'Tis better to be preserved in brine than rot in honey."

- God was pleased at length to release him, Aug 21 1693, in the 67th year of his age. His funeral service was preached by Mr Thomas CHAPMAN.

He had good abilities for the pulpit and was a practical popular preacher. His carriage was exemplary, his council desired by all about him. He was very humble, and eminently faithfull, yet prudent in giving reproof.* He had seventeen children, though but three survived him. He was a very tender Father to them, and greatly concerned about their souls. He daily put up earnest prayers for them with tears.

* Regarding there being seventeen children, I can only account for 14. His first wife brought him two namely Adonijah b, 1649 and Elizabeth 1651, both at Plympton. Dorothy his second wife, gave him twelve.—A.R.B.

All of them that lived to years of discretion, gave him ground to hope that a good work was wrought in them. He declared he had rather see them all in their graves, than they should live to hold a candle to a Popish priest. He bore the death of those whom God was pleased to take from him with remarkable resignation, and preached their funeral Sermons himself.

He was never imprisoned or apprehended though often searched after; and was sometimes strangely preserved. He died in the Town in which he was ejected, after having endured the most exquisite torments from the Strangury, which made him more able to pen those books "Heart Ease," and "Helps for faith in times of Affliction."*

A BOOK OF FAMILY PORTRAITS

BENJAMIN BODDINGTON, 1692-1777.

BENJAMIN BODDINGTON'S portrait, with his wig off, by his brother James, is thus inscribed, "Benjⁿ BODDINGTON, taken thus asleep, 1707," that is, when the subject was only fifteen years of age. Interesting, as showing that a schoolboy, in Queen Anne's day, would have his head shaved and wear a wig. The size of the hand and the spread of the shoulders are humorously exaggerated.

Benjamin was born 26 October 1692, so 'tis said, though no precise authority can be given, the fourteenth child of George BODDINGTON (see THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST, I, p. 69) and Hannah COPE, his second wife. He was a Turkey merchant and British Consul at Aleppo, 1712-1725. In his father, George BODDINGTON's, will, proved in 1719, are mentioned two sums advanced, £14,000 and £1,000, the "Sun" Tavern in New Fish Street, and fish-shops on either side, also a house on the North side of Lothbury, London.

On 9 February 1726/7 he married, by license, at St. Michael's, Cornhill, but a few yards from Lothbury, Miss Elizabeth BALL, daughter and subsequently sole heir of Samuel BALL, citizen and sadler, by Mary, daughter of George PAPILLON of London, merchant, and of Great Bentley, Essex, by Mary his wife, daughter of Thomas NICHOLSON.

Mrs. BODDINGTON (née BALL) died 5 November 1745, and was buried at Bunhill Fields. She had issue six children.

On 12 January 1748/9, Benjamin married, secondly, by license, at St. Paul's Cathedral, Mary, daughter of John SKINNER, and lived with her for over 30 years. She died 29 August 1779, aged 79, and was buried in Great St. Helen's church. He was Member of the Clothworkers' Company, and Master thereof 1757, was living at Enfield in 1777, survived his wife but a few days, and dying 10 September 1779, and was also buried at St. Helen's, in his 87th year.

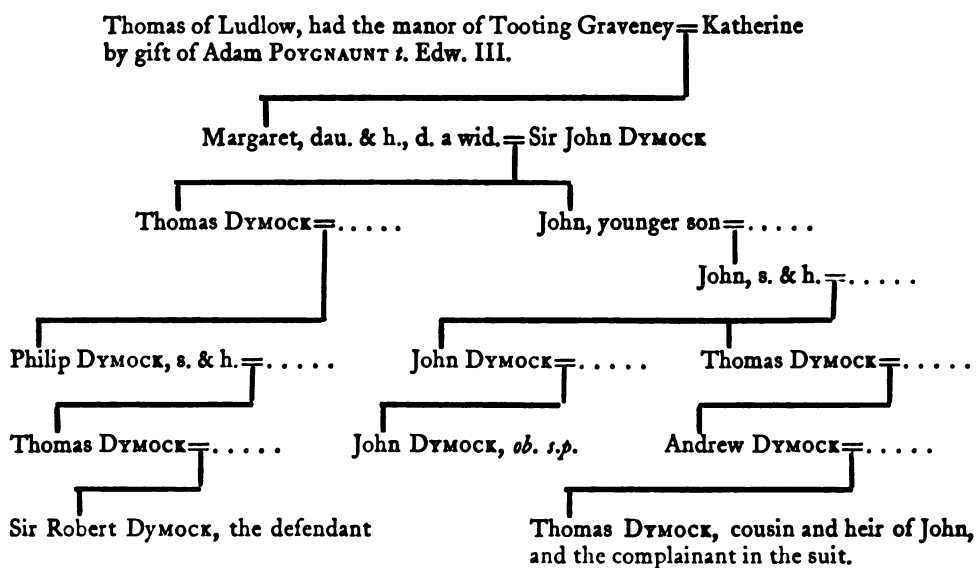

A portrait in the book, facing the one given here, of a young man (with his wig on) is probably of himself, but no name is written under it. (Authorities: Wills, Parish Registers, Marriage Licences.)

DYMOCK DESCENT from EARLY CHANCERY PROCEEDINGS

BY ARTHUR J. JEWERS

THE following descent is a remarkable instance of the kind of information that may sometimes be found among the records of the Court of Chancery. As the pleadings are addressed to Thomas, Lord Legate, Cardinal Archbishop of York, the date is between 1518, when Wolsey was made Papal Legate, and 1529, the year of his downfall.

The plaintiff Thomas Dymock, in his Bill of Complaint sets forth that Dame Margaret Dymock widow of Sir John Dymock, Knt. was seized of the Manor of Totyng (now Tooting) Graveney in Surrey with 27 acres of land and a rent of 12/- in the parish of Mitcham, in her demesne as of fee, and settled it on John her younger son and to the heirs male of his body, and gives the descent to the claimant Thomas. The answer of the defendant Sir Robert Dymock sets out that the manor of Totyng Graveney with the 27 acres of land and 12/- rent in Mitcham, belonged to one Adam Poygnaunt, who being seized thereof levied a fine in 4 Edw. III, and gave the same to Thomas J. Ludlow and Katherine his wife and to the heirs of their bodies, that their daughter Katherine married Sir John Dymock and their son Thomas Dymock was seized of the same, and so from father to son it came to the defendant Sir Robert Dymock who has the deeds and evidences, the descent of the elder line is given and the proceedings show the following pedigree. It seems probable that Adam Poygnaunt may have been father or uncle of Katherine wife of Thomas of Ludlow. Reference. Early Chanc: Vol. 498, Nos. 65, 66, 67,

ON THE COPYING OF M.I. IN CHURCHYARDS

SO much importance has been given to this subject in recent years that it is not surprising that some controversy has arisen as to the best method of procedure.

We have two points to keep in view:

1. M. I.'s are of value to the genealogist (as distinct from the antiquarian) by reason of the records of relationships and ages so frequently stated therein.

2. The older stones are perishing fast; each year, possibly each month, adds to the number of those whose information is already, for ever, beyond recall.

Let us, therefore, consider how the genealogist may best form his plans so as to snatch, as it were, this precious testimony from oblivion. Clearly time is all important to him here: he must immediately make the best use of such means as are available and must proceed with this sole end in view.

To save the inscriptions before too late.

If indeed there could be found in every parish an ardent and careful transcriber it might be possible for a complete transcript to be made of every churchyard M. I., and after this had been done a second army of transcribers could be entrusted with the work of transferring the names, dates, ages and relationships from the transcripts to the Slips of the Society of Genealogists for inclusion in the Index. Once in their Index the information immediately becomes of use to inquirers. The complete transcript itself could remain intact on the reference shelf and if it had been made to include additional details, for instance quotations from Scripture, eulogies, and information as to the position, size, style and material of the memorial, such a document would prove of value to the archæologist, the topographer and, in fact, to any antiquarian. One can imagine, too, how such a complete transcript would be welcomed by the genealogist who wished perchance to examine the M. I.'s of some particular churchyard and would rejoice to find in the comfortable rooms of the Society of Genealogists, without the trouble of a journey to the country, the information for which he might be seeking.

Alas! there is but a small band of voluntary workers in the field and although there are, no doubt, some genealogists who hold that the copying of M. I.'s should only be done in the complete way above described and as it has already been done in some comparatively few instances, yet the writer thinks that it is most important for the work of transcription to go forward on another and simpler plan, avoiding, however, those "selections" to which so much objection has been taken.

What the writer advocates is the following method:

1. Limit the copying to the names, dates, ages and relationships, discarding all superfluous matter; 2. Limit the research to some definite date, such as the beginning of civil registration, 1837.

By adopting this practical method it would be possible to work quickly through the counties, securing in the space of a short time all the older links with a past which would assuredly be lost during the long course of a thoroughly complete survey.

When each county has been dealt with in this way up to 1837, a second visit should be paid to the churchyards and the process be repeated for a further period of years or the whole might be completed on the second visit, if the number of M. I.'s be but small. Stones later than about 1830 will, in the opinion of the writer, remain legible still for many years to come, his experience of some two hundred churchyards having shown him that (except in some cases of very unsatisfactory stone-masonry) there is seldom any difficulty in deciphering M. I.'s later than 1830; while he is more and more impressed with the forces of Nature which are steadily taking from us facts, invaluable because of their age.

It is hoped that some readers may be encouraged to offer their help in this matter. A few hours—spent maybe in some sunny country churchyard amid the song of birds—may result in the preservation of some most valuable statement concerning the ancestry of a distracted seeker after truth. "Le temps passe, l'amitié reste," let us then work while we may, for our friends!

“A CONJUROR OR CUNNING MAN” OF THE SEVEN- TEENTH CENTURY

(NOTES FROM CHANCERY DEPOSITIONS BEFORE 1714
No. 503/42)

BY F. J. POPE

FOR some reasons, which need not be specified, certain persons at or near Nottingham were, in 1685, desirous of convincing the Court of Chancery that one Edward ASHMORE, a cordwainer of the town, was a man of evil life and fame, while others were equally interested in showing that he was an upright, honest, and credible townsman. The former refer to convictions against ASHMORE for stealing deer in the Duke of Newcastle's Park and the King's Chase, to charges of playing cards on Sundays, to his excommunication, and so on, but they relied chiefly on his repute as “a conjuror or cunning man” and on the instances they cite of his “conjuring” for the recovery of missing property. Witnesses on the other side generally ignore the conjuring, but one or two of them mention that ASHMORE possessed two books on Astrology called Lillyes Almanack and Lillyes Introduction and one expresses his belief that ASHMORE “understands Astrology.” The purpose of these notes is to extract from the depositions any data which indicate the attitude towards the “Black Arts” adopted by Nottingham folk in the latter part of the seventeenth century.

Altogether a round dozen of ASHMORE's efforts in conjuring are given, and, of these, four may be dismissed very briefly. In each the conjuror received four or five shillings, and sometimes an additional shilling for ale or strong drink, for recovering goods, horses, or farm stock and made a complete failure. The others deserve a little more attention.

On some goods being lost from the house of a Mrs JACKSON, ASHMORE contracted to find them and directed search to be made at Watnall, Notts. He did not, however, have fair play in this instance, for the magistrate, to whom application was made for a warrant to search, on hearing the circumstances, said that “if shee (meaning the said JACKSON) had been at the Devill for her goods shee might likewise go thither for the warrant.”

Mr Laurence ATHORPE, of Nottingham, an attorney, had a silver cup stolen from his house, and his clerk went to ASHMORE "to conjure for the cupp." He conjured with success this time and not long after brought it to Mr ATHORPE, stating that he had found it wrapped in the coat of a woman walking in one of the streets. His reward was 19s.

Humphry BARKER, a felmonger, deposes that a man, who owed him £30, had, to avoid payment, fled to Ireland, and the deponent, being hopeless of finding his man without assistance, took ASHMORE with him to Ireland. The conjuror (BARKER says) had never seen the debtor and had no knowledge of him but nevertheless knew the man by certain marks which had never been observed by others, and ran down his quarry. Another success for ASHMORE which put £5 in his pocket.

John DODSLEY, a saddler, deposes that he had known ASHMORE for thirty years, and hearing that "he could cast a scheme" obtained his assistance for the recovery of a mare, paying him 5s., and, according to his direction, went to Northampton in expectation of finding the mare, but was disappointed. DODSLEY adds that he did not believe that ASHMORE "did deal with the devill or black art for if he had thought so hee would never have gone to him."

George MARTIN, yeoman, in search of a mare and colt, was sent by ASHMORE successively to Charnwood Forest in Leicestershire, to Burleigh Park in Rutland, and to Thorney Fen in Lincolnshire, the conjuror consulting a book after each failure. At Thorney Fen MARTIN "heard of" his mare and colt but never recovered them. He asserts that though ASHMORE had never seen the missing animals he "yet did exactly describe them to him by several marks and true descriptions."

Arthur WARREN, of Stapleford, Notts, a justice of the peace, recounts how his neighbour, George JACKSON, having missed 10s. in money from the pocket of his breeches, which he had laid on his bed, obtained from ASHMORE a written description of the thief. The description tallied precisely with the appearance of a maid in JACKSON's service, and her master, relying on ASHMORE's skill, accused the maid, who at once sought and obtained Mr WARREN's protection. The magistrate in his deposition expressed his intention of indicting ASHMORE for "conjurat[i]on."

John GRANGER had been ostler at "The George" inn at Derby when a riding coat, which had been attached to a saddle, was stolen from the stables. ASHMORE happened to be at the inn at the time and was pointed out to GRANGER as a man who would help him to find the coat. Having been paid his customary 5s., ASHMORE told the ostler that the article wanted was hidden in the hedge of the inn-garden. The innkeeper, GRANGER, and several others then searched the hedge "diligently" without finding a trace of the missing garment. But when ASHMORE joined the party he found it at once.

George ONRICK, a silk-stocking-framework knitter, relates that Mrs POOLE having lost some clothes, which had been lying in the water, asked deponent's master to procure ASHMORE "to conjure for her cloathes." The conjuror said that they were behind a chimney of a neighbour's house, and that they had several holes burnt in them, and "soone after this deponent's master had given the said ASHMORE orders to conjure for the said cloathes (w^{ch} was a quiet and still day) there suddenly arose an extreame great wind insomuch that it blew this deponent's master's hatt from of his head att which he was much amazed and putt in a great fright." ASHMORE then said that in three or four days the clothes would be found by the side of a certain wall, and the deponent adds that he himself saw the clothes by the wall with several holes burnt in them.

Twenty-eight witnesses in all gave evidence, seventeen being accusers and eleven upholders of ASHMORE, and the former were superior in quality as well as quantity. The mayor of Nottingham, three aldermen of the town, a justice of the peace, another gentleman styled an esquire, and two clergymen all agreed as to ASHMORE's evil reputation, and one stated that he had been accounted a conjuror or cunning man for the previous sixteen years. Deponents on the other side included only one above the rank of a petty tradesman, the exception being ATHORPE, the attorney, who (as has been related) had himself employed the cunning man, and whose evidence is, moreover, discounted by the fact that ASHMORE was his client.

It need not, therefore, be doubted that ASHMORE had, for a long period, practised the art of "conjuring," and must have been consulted by a large number (perhaps hundreds) of people. This shows a general appreciation of the power he was supposed to wield, and it is not difficult to read into the depositions, which have been quoted, a belief in a diabolical source for this power. The term "conjuror," it may be suggested, was but an euphemism employed to save his consultants from the penalties incurred by those who invoked the aid of wizards and witches, and perhaps the references to Astrology were intended to serve the same purpose. How far the better educated classes agreed with the general mass of the people on the subject of witchcraft and the allied arts is a vexed question. If the records of the Ecclesiastical Courts should ever become available for consultation, we may hope for a flood of light on the subject, but meanwhile such documents as those reviewed here (unfortunately not often met with), may help to elucidate the question.

From the above it would seem that the book belonged to the BAVINS from 1659 to 1666 or thereabouts, passing into the possession of John JOHNSON in or before 1701, and remaining with him until 1719 or later.

It is a pity the year of Henery BAVIN's decease is not legible.

The names John BAVIN, Henery BAVIN, John JOHNSON, occur frequently throughout the book, together with notes of accounts, and references to various sermons, notably one "at the Tower" [of London?], which latter may indicate that either the BAVINS, or JOHNSONS, or both, resided a long time in its vicinity.

Many other notes of no genealogical interest.

SOME EPITAPHS ON BLACK SERVANTS

WHEN Harry WARRINGTON landed at Bristol no one thought the worse of him because he was attended by a black servant or slave, Gumbo; so, at least, we gather from what THACKERAY says. This was in the year 1756 and it was not until sixteen years later (1772) that Lord MANSFIELD delivered the famous judgment declaring that slavery in England was illegal. Five generations have passed since that time. We need not, therefore, wonder that epitaphs on black servants are now few and far between in England, and it may be worth while to place on record some of those legible still in our churchyards. This note contains two such from the county of Middlesex:

“Here lyeth
Toby PLEASANT
an African born
He was early in Life rescued from West Indian slavery by a gentleman of this parish which he ever gratefully remembered and who he continued to serve as a Freeman
honestly and faithfully to the end of his life
He died the 2nd of May 1784 aged about 45 years.”
M. I. (CHURCHYARD).
Hillingdon, co. Middx.

(in the enclosure E. of the chancel):

“Here lyeth the body of Charles POMPEY late servant to y^e Lady Thomas who breed him of a child in y^e Christian Faith he being by birth an Ethiopian in Memory of his honesty and faithfull service this stone is erected for a pattern not only to those servants of his own Nation but to all such as are borne of Christian Parents to follow his Example who behav’d himself lowly and reverently to all his betters civilly and kindly to all his equals which made him lamented by all that knew him he died about y^e 24th year of his age January the 9th 1719.

M. I. (CHURCHYARD)
Hampton, co. Middx.
(tablet on E. boundary wall).

Somewhat analogous to the foregoing is the epitaph on the headstone of George Alexander GRATTAN in the churchyard at Great Marlow, Bucks (N. side, about the centre). GRATTON was the remarkable child known as “the spotted negro boy,” whose skin and hair were mottled in hues of dark brown and white. He was exhibited by RICHARDSON the showman of Bartholomew Fair, who was a native of Great Marlow. The epitaph reads:

“To the Memory of
George Alexander GRATTON
the
Spotted Negro Boy
A native of the Caribbee Islands
in the West Indies
Who departed this life Feb. 3. 1813
Aged 4 years 9 months
This stone is erected by his only Friend and Guardian
M^r John RICHARDSON of London.”

At RICHARDSON's request, the boy had been christened with the names George Alexander at Newington (St. Mary), co. Surrey.

HIC JACET.

THE PUZZLE EPITAPH

(See THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST, pages 29, 58, 74.) A correspondent has kindly sent us copies of the Yorkshire Weekly Post, for the 13th and 20th June and 4th July last, which include a discussion on this remarkable inscription.

In the number for the 13th June appeared an illustration of the tomb, with a note, over the signature of Mrs J. C. KERR, while in that of the 20th our correspondent drew attention to the suggestion put forward in THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST (p. 58) taken from PETTIGREW's Collection of Epitaphs.

Afterwards Mrs KERR wrote to the Revd J. COOKE-YARBOROUGH, vicar of Christchurch, seeking an explanation of “the ROGER tomb,” and his answer, which appears on the 4th July, we give in full:

Dear Madam,—I am pleased to send you a few particulars concerning the tomb of Henry ROGERS. The following is the local account, and very probably the most correct:

Henry ROGERS was one of ten or more in family. He had quarrels with his people, and went abroad. While he was away nine members of the family died, and were buried in the family grave. When he came home, and found the grave filled up with his brethren, he had them all disinterred and buried elsewhere. After his decease he was buried there alone. The inscription was afterwards put up by some one unknown. He appears in our Registers as Mayor of Christchurch.

The Rev. T. Perkins, in his book on Wimborne Minster and Christchurch Priory, says: “It is said by some that Cromwell, afterwards Protector, was at Christchurch, and dug up some lead coffins to make bullets for his soldiers, and flung the bodies out of ten such coffins into one grave; but this is manifestly incorrect. The very date precludes the idea, for the Civil War did not begin till more than fifteen months after the date carved on this stone. . . . A far more probable explanation is that which states that the ten bodies here interred were those of ten shipwrecked sailors, who were first buried on the cliffs near the spot where they were washed ashore; but the lord of the manor, when he heard thereof, waxed exceeding wroth, and a strife ensued between him and one Henry ROGERS, Mayor of Christchurch, the former insisting on their removal to consecrated ground, the latter objecting to the removal, probably on the ground of the expense; but in the end the lord of the manor had his way. But the Mayor, to save the cost of ten separate graves, had them all buried in one, and placed this inscription over their remains as a protest against the conduct of the lord of the manor in moving their remains from their first resting-place."

GROSE, in his Olio, gives a tradition that it refers to some drowned persons who had been buried in the churchyard.—Yours very truly,

J. COOKE-YARBOROUGH.

The New Vicarage,
Christchurch,
June 27, 1914.

It will be noticed that Mr COOKE-YARBOROUGH's suggestion as to the burial of ten mariners is also referred to by Mr PROTHERO in the BRITISH ARCHIVIST (p. 74).

As the Parish Registers are defective for 1641, a search of the Bishop's transcripts might elucidate this puzzle. It is possible, too, that the quarrel between the Lord of the Manor and the Mayor was settled in one of the numerous courts of the day, and the discovery of the suit would doubtless clear up the matter. The Borough records and Churchwardens' accounts should certainly contain some reference to the affair.

THE WAR

It will probably be necessary to discontinue this Magazine during the war.

Our subscribers will realize that now there are duties more urgent than the publication of a genealogical magazine.

Should it be decided to suspend publication, no further notice will be given. Our readers can rest assured that they will eventually receive all the twelve parts for which they have subscribed.

FREDERICK SIMON SNELL, M.A.

THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST

Edited by RICHARD HOLWORTHY, F.S.G.

VOL. I, Nos. 19-20.

SEPTEMBER, 1914 to JUNE, 1915.

FREDERICK SIMON SNELL, M.A. (1862-1914)

WE regret to record the death of F. S. SNELL, who passed away after a long fight with ill-health at The Chestnuts, Colin Deep Lane, The Hyde, N.W., on Tuesday, November 3.

He was the sixth son of Henry Saxon SNELL, F.R.I.B.A. (ob. 1904), a descendant of Richard SNELL of Sonning, Berks (1726-1817), was educated privately at Maidenhead, whence he proceeded to University College, London, and thereafter to Durham University, where he took his M.A. in 1883. He was also a Member of the Middle Temple and a Fellow and one of the Founders of the Society of Genealogists of London. Of slight physique, but untiring energy, despite attacks of ill-health, SNELL spent his earlier years following the profession of schoolmaster; his malady making residence abroad advisable he had two lengthy sojourns in South Africa, the later one during the Boer War, when he shouldered a rifle and took duty behind wire entanglements with the best. But though he put his best into his profession his heart always turned towards antiquarian studies, and more especially to genealogy, so that in 1906, when some improvement in his circumstances brought him home again he decided to settle in London, to be near the main sources of information, the Record Office, Somerset House, and the British Museum, whence he could draw the material for his genealogical collections.

His main interest lay in the yeoman families of Berkshire, and it is in his labours towards working out their descents that his best memorial will be found. The present writer often discussed with him his schemes for a comprehensive collection of data from original sources, intended to simplify the task of future inquirers into this by-way of a fascinating study. By his energy and untiring labour he gathered together a very fine and well-arranged mass of facts about by-gone Berkshire people, which, under his will, go to enrich the collections of the Society of Genealogists of London.

He printed little. Two or three articles in The Pedigree Register evince a well-stored mind and a promise of what pleasure might have been derived from his antiquarian humour had he desired publicity of that kind. He was an occasional contributor to Notes and Queries.

TO THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST he was contributing at the time of his death a valuable epitome of the Chancery Depositions before 1714. He had also, in an advanced stage, for The British Record Society, a continuation of the excellent Calendar of Wills in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, covering the years 1718 to 1725, which will, it is hoped, form one of their future volumes.

SNELL had no illusions as to the "importance" of his work; his sense of humour always denied that. But he laboured unremittingly and with wonderful speed, early and late, conscientiously, almost, one might say, meticulously, for the nature of his work demanded even that quality, and he rejoiced in the steady growth of his material, the value of which only those who come into this inheritance will appreciate.

In the formation of The Society of Genealogists of London he took an active part and scarcely missed a Committee Meeting during the first four years of its existence. Acting as Honorary Secretary of the Committee on the Consolidated Index, he had the satisfaction of seeing the index-slips reach a total of something like a million in number under his supervision and practical help.

THE SOCIETY OF GENEALOGISTS OF LONDON

The General Meeting of this Society was held at its Rooms on June 25, 1915. The resignations from the Executive Committee of Sir Thomas TROUBRIDGE, Bt., and of Messrs E. F. BRIGGS (Hon. Treasurer of the Society and Chairman of the Executive Committee), Chas. A. BERNAU, and Richard HOLWORTHY were announced and confirmed at their own request.

DANIEL DEFOE AND THE FAMILY OF DEFOE

BY W. McB. AND F. MARCHAM

There is an article in Notes and Queries (11 S. V. 241) by Mr A. J. C. GUIMARAENS that prompts us to make public the following document which we transcribed some years ago.

OTHER information shows DEFOE as a litigant in at least five other cases. It is evident that his life is going to be very much less obscure when research shall have revealed all the records concerning it, and in dealing with such an important subject it seems desirable that newly discovered documents should be printed in full. As to the document now given we may point out that it relates to a period in DEFOE's life which is passed over in silence in all printed accounts of him.

" 4 November, 1689. Hern.

" To the Right Honoble. the Lords Commissioners for the custody of the Greate Seale of England,

" Humbly complaining, sheweth unto your Lordships your Orator Daniell FROE of the city of London merchant. That amongst other his dealings he traded by commission from Joseph BRABAN of Lyn Regis in the county of Suffolk (blank) and sold several goods for him, and on his account and thereby contracted diverse debts for the goods so sold which debts were payable on the account and at the risque of the said Joseph BRABAN, and your Orator was to be accountable for the same when received by him but not before or otherwise. And that on or about the 26th day of July in the year of our Lord 1688 there did remain due from a great many several persons to the said Joseph BRABAN the sum of £396 7s. 1d. for goods sold and delivered to them by your Orator on the account of the said BRABAN as aforesaid. And that your Orator and the said Joseph BRABAN did then come to an agreement for the insuring of £374 18s. 7d. part of the aforesaid £396 7s. 1d. which agreement was to this or the like effect. To wit That your Orator should take upon himself the care and trouble of collecting or getting in the said £374 18s. 7d. from the respective debtors who owed the same and every month pay to the said BRABAN so much as he should then have received of the said debtors and if any of the said debtors should happen to prove insolvent that then your Orator should make good to the said BRABAN the debt of such person insolvent and that your Orator should pay and deduct to himself 9d. out of every pound received by him of the aforesaid sum of £374 18s. 7d.

" And your Orator further sheweth that soon after this agreement the said Joseph BRABAN did tender to and request your Orator to execute a penal bond of £600 conditioned for your Orator to pay the said BRABAN the said £374 18s. in monthly payments as the same should come into your Orator from the respective debtors thereof and the whole in nine months from the date of the said bond excepting to himself the said 9d. in the pound. And that your Orator confiding in the honesty and integrity of the said BRABAN did execute the said bond he the said Joseph BRABAN then and at several times since promising and agreeing with your Orator that though the condition of the said bond did limit and tie up your Orator to pay the whole sum of £374 18s. within nine months next ensuing the date thereof as aforesaid that yet he the said BRABAN would not expect or demand the same of your Orator so soon unless your Orator should receive it within that time of the said debtors but would forbear with your Orator and stay for the same till your Orator should receive it from the aforesaid respective debtors.

“ And your Orator further sheweth that he in pursuance of the said agreement did spend much time and undergo great trouble about the collecting of the said debts and hath paid to the said Joseph BRABAN much more thereof than your Orator hath received from the aforesaid debtors particularly your Orator paid to the said BRABAN himself on or about the 1st day of August, 1688, £2 7s. 4d. and on or about the 18th day of the same August your Orator paid by the order or to the bill of the said BRABAN the further sum of £15 and on or about the 4th day of September in the same year the further sum of £60 and on or about the 27th day of October in the same year your Orator paid by the orders or to the bills of the said BRABAN the further sum of £10 and on or about the 23rd day of March in the same year the further sum of £40 and on or about the 25th day of May in the year 1689 your Orator paid to the said BRABAN himself the further sum of £60 15s. 6d. besides diverse other sums of money paid by your Orator to the said BRABAN or his order on the said account.

“ And your Orator further sheweth that on or about the 7th day of the same May the said Joseph BRABAN demanded of your Orator the remaining part of the said £374 18s. and your Orator then shewed and satisfied the said BRABAN that your Orator had already paid him a great deal more than your Orator had received from the aforesaid respective debtors of the said £374 18s. 7d. and therefore desired of the said BRABAN a further time for the payment of the remaining part. And thereupon the said BRABAN did desire your Orator to give him some notes payable under his hand payable at certain days then to come for the remaining part of the said £374 18s. promising and agreeing with your Orator that if the aforesaid respective debtors did not pay your Orator what was arreare of the said £374 18s. before such time as your Orator's notes should become payable that then he would forbear your Orator for so much as should then remain unpaid to your Orator and give him a longer time for the payment thereof. And your Orator at the same time trusting to the honesty and integrity of the said Joseph BRABAN did give him diverse notes under your Orator's hand payable at certain days then to come for the remaining part of the said £374 18s. and hath paid him several sums of money toward the discharge thereof particularly on or about the 9th day of July, 1689, the sum of £50 towards the satisfaction and discharge of the said notes and your Orator is willing and ready to pay him what is arrear though your Orator hath not yet received the same of the aforesaid debtors.

“But now so it is please your Lordships that the said Joseph BRABAN combining and confederating with diverse persons (whose names are at present unknown to your Orator but when discovered your Orator prays the same may be inserted and they made parties hereunto with apt words for to charge them) for to improverish and ruin your Orator doth refuse to accept of the remaining part of the said £374 18s. but doth sue your Orator at law upon the said notes and also threatens to sue him upon the aforesaid penal bond and to take the advantage of the penalty thereof because the whole £374 18s. was not paid at the precise time therein specified.

“Forasmuch therefore as matters of this kind and nature do come properly before your Lordships in this Honourable Court for relief and for that your Orator's witnesses who could prove the truth of the aforesaid agreements and other matters charged in the Bill be either dead or do live and inhabit in parts beyond the seas or places so remote that your Orator doth not know where to find them. To the end therefore that the said Joseph BRABAN and the other confederates may upon their several corporal oaths declare whether the said Joseph BRABAN did not promise and agree with your Orator before at and since the time of the executing of the aforesaid penal bond of £600 by your Orator that he would waive and not stand upon the clause therein whereby the whole £374 18s. is to be paid to him by your Orator within nine months if it so fell out that the same was not paid to your Orator within that time by the respective debtors or what promise or agreement the said BRABAN did make to that or the like effect and may discover what sums of money by himself or order and by whom hath received of your Orator or by his order and what notes he hath taken under your Orator's hands since that the said bond was executed by your Orator and if the said moneys were not paid and notes given in or towards the satisfaction of the said bond or upon what other account and may set forth the times when and places where and by whom and in whose presence the said moneys were so paid and notes given and the dates and contents of the same and may answer all and singular the several charges of the Bill as particularly as of the same were here again repeted and reiterated and they particularly interrogated thereunto and that your Orator may be relieved upon the premises according to equity and good conscience.

"May it please your Lordships the premises considered to grant unto your Orator their Majesties' gracious writ or writs of subpœna to be directed unto the said Joseph BRABAN and the rest of the confederates when discovered thereby requiring them and every of them at a certain time day and under a certain pain therein to be limited personally to be and appear before your Lordships in this Honourable Court then and there upon their corporal oaths true and distinct answer to make to all and singular the premises hereinbefore mentioned and further to stand and abide such further order and directions therein as to your Lordships shall seem most agreeable with equity and good conscience. And your Orator shall ever pray &c.

AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY FINCHLEY POET

BY W. McB. AND F. MARCHAM

READERS of this periodical will appreciate the following will to which the late Mr F. S. SNELL drew our attention recently.

John Hedges Esq.
 This 5th day of May
 Being Airy and Gay
 To Hipp not enclind
 But of Vigorous mind
 And my Body in Health
 Ile dispose of my Wealth,
 And of all I'm to leave
 On this side of the Grave to some one or other
 I think to my Brother
 But because I foresaw
 That my Brethren in Law
 If I did not take Care
 Woud come in for a Share
 Which I noe ways intended
 Till their Manners were mended
 (And of that God knows there's no sign)
 I do therefore Enjoyn
 And do strictly command

Witness my hand
 That nought I have got
 Be brought in Hotch Pott
 But I give and devise
 As much as in me lyes
 To the Son of my Mother
 Myn own Dear Brother
 To have and to hold
 All my Silver and Gold
 As the Affectionate Pledges
 Of his Brother John Hedges.

13 July, 1737.

Which day appeared personally Paul WHICHCOTE of Finchley in the County of Middlesex Esquire and Robert ANDREWS of Saint Georges Hanover Square in the County aforesaid Gentleman and severally made Oath that these Deponents were well Acquainted with John Hedges late of the Parish of Saint George's Hanover Square but at ffinchley in the County of Middlesex Esquire deceased for several years before his death and during such their Acquaintance of him have seen him write and thereby became well acquainted with his manner and Character of Hand Writing. And having now Viewed and perused the Paper Writing hereunto annexed Purporting to be the last Will and Testament or Testamentary Schedule of the said John Hedges deceased, beginning thus This 5th day of May being Airy and Gay, To Hipp not enclined but of Vigorous mind, and my Body in health Ile dispose of my Wealth &c. And ending thus, To have and to hold All my Silver and Gold, As the Affectionate Pledges of his Brother John Hedges, Do verily believe the said last Will and Testament or Testamentary Schedule to be totally wrote and Subscribed by and with the proper Hand Writing of him the said John Hedges deceased Paul WHICHCOTE Robert ANDREWS.

Same day the said Paul WHICHCOTE and Robert ANDREWS were sworn to the truth of this Attestation before me J. ANDREW, Surrogate.
 Present Rich: CHESLYN, Notary Publick.

On the thirteenth day of July in the year of our Lord One thousand Seven hundred and thirty seven a Power was granted to Charles HEDGES Esquire the Natural and Lawfull Brother next of Kinn and Universal Legatee named in the Will or Testamentary Schedule of John HEDGES late of the Parish of Saint George Hanover Square but at ffinchley in the County of Middlesex Esquire Batchelor deceased to Adminster. . . .

THE WAR

WE wish to take this opportunity of thanking our subscribers for their patience and consideration.

To those who have written asking why the publication of this magazine has become so erratic, answers have been sent pointing out the difficulties which have to be faced owing to the war.

Many of us have fresh duties which have arisen since last August. It is, of course, possible to produce a monthly magazine under almost any such conditions, but we have decided in our subscribers' interests—and our own—that the quality of the magazine's contents must be maintained whatever delays this course may entail in its publication.

Subscribers will lose nothing, for no fresh subscription will become due until the issue of Part XXIV. It will be obvious to any thoughtful person that if Part XXIV appears before the conclusion of the war, so many subscriptions will be discontinued that the BRITISH ARCHIVIST will cease to exist.

The present issue consists of Parts XIX and XX, leaving only four parts then due to our subscribers.

BOOKS RECEIVED

The House of Harrison, by C. R. HARRISON, B.Sc., and H. G. HARRISON, M.A. (London, HARRISON and Sons, 45 Pall Mall, S.W.) 118 pages, 5s. net.

We welcome this addition to the monographs on our great publishing houses, in the form of a handsome quarto, profusely illustrated, and printed on hand-made paper, which thanks to the generosity of Messrs HARRISON, is practically a gift to the Printer Pension Corporation, the proceeds of the sale being given to that body.

The work possesses the advantage of appealing equally to the collectors of printing books and London Topography, while of the genealogical interest we will speak later.

Reading of the older printers in these pages, one is forcibly reminded how little scientific work has been done in this direction, of ROBERTS and BUCKLEY, for instance, there is enough material extant to form volumes the size of the House of Harrison.

One of the most interesting feature is the accounts of the London Gazette (the first twenty-three numbers of which appeared as the Oxford Gazette), which was first issued in November, 1665, and from which the newspapers of the present day obtain their "official" information. It forms one of the most valuable sources for the genealogist. Messrs HARRISON's connection with this world famous publication apparently commenced as far back as 1756.

In dealing with the family history of the publisher of Burke (in its various forms) the authors warn us that "the late Mr Thomas HARRISON is believed to have fully verified the pedigree, though his papers and records were unfortunately afterwards destroyed by fire." Comment, in these pages, is superfluous.

The crux of the pedigree lies in the parentage of Thomas HARRISON of Reading (1696-1745) which in theory is held to affiliate his family with the HARRISONS of Hurst and Finchampstead; there seems to be some grounds for this, as Sir Richard HARRISON, who died in 1683, having lost his wealth in the Royalist cause, is stated to have had fifteen children.

These families are elusive, as we know to our sorrow, the growing wealth of a larger population anxious to obtrude themselves upon public notice tended to obscure the representatives of families who were content to rely upon known descents for their position.

We regret that space does not permit of our quoting the note on "Pedigrees"; however, we give a query which appears on page 91, viz., What were "Black Lace Sweepstakes to be returned 2/-"? Perhaps some reader of the "B.A." can find a solution.

The House of Cecil, by G. Ravenscroft DENNIS. (London, CONSTABLE and Co., Ltd.) 327 pp., demy 8vo, 15 plates, 10s. 6d. net.

The House of Cecil stands unique in regard to its connection with politics—a line of politicians from the reign of Henry VIII to our own time.

The lives of the BURGHLEYS has engaged many writers, but with varying success, which is not surprising considering the great amount of conflicting evidence upon which we have to work.

A point which seems to escape the notice of most of the biographers of William, Lord BURGHLEY, is his absolute lack of humour, which is exemplified in his use of torture, as much as by his treatment of powerful political enemies. He seems to have been a business man (in the modern sense), keen and unscrupulous, but that he was a statesman seems open to question.

Perhaps the chief interest in this book is to be found in the pages devoted to the Third Marquess of Salisbury, as being more nearly concerned in the present European conflict.

Mr DENNIS has given us a book which should be much appreciated and which deserves to be widely read.

The History of Calwich Abbey. By Mrs Mary Teresa FORTESCUE. Demy 8vo, 220 pp., 16 plates. 7s. 6d. net. (Winchester: Warren & Son, Ltd.)

Not many of our historic family seats have a greater interest than Calwich, and not many fall into the hands of so competent an author as Mrs FORTESCUE, despite the fact that it was "written in spare and hurried moments of a busy and wandering life, in a swaying cabin in the tropics, or a dusty journey across the veld."

The descent of the Priory is traced from its foundation before 1149, by Margaret de BUBENTON and her husband, Nicholas Fitznigel de GRESLEY, grandson of Robert de STAFFORD, one of the Conqueror's favourites, and founder of the family of LONGFORD, connected for 400 years with Calwich.

In 1571 Calwich passed from the LONGFORDS to John FLEETWOOD, and remained in the possession of his family until it was sold in 1728 by Sir Thomas FLEETWOOD, Bart., to Dr HARE, Bishop of St Asaph, who six years later sold it to Bernard GRANVILLE, grandson of Bernard GRANVILLE, who was sent by MONK with the message which brought CHARLES II back to England. On the death of the Rev. John Dewes GRANVILLE in 1826, Calwich reverted to his nephew, Court DEWES, of Wellesborne, who adopted the surname of GRANVILLE, who afterwards sold it to the Hon. and Rev. Augustus DUNCOMBE, in the possession of whose descendants it now remains.

There are some valuable chapters dealing with the literary interest of the district; for instance, Mrs DELANY was daughter and sister of owners of Calwich; ROUSSEAU lived for a year at Wootton, two miles distant; Thomas MOORE appears amongst the "Poetical Neighbours;" while Ellastone as Hayslope, was the home of Adam BEDE, and was the scene of some of George ELIOT's earliest recollections.

The plates are well executed and there is a good index.

The Place-Names of Nottinghamshire. By Heinrich MUTSCHMANN, M.A., Ph.D. Demy 8vo. 179 pp. (London: Cambridge University Press).

We welcome this addition to the Cambridge Archæological and Ethnological Series, and look forward to the day when we have on our shelves a volume for every county.

No genealogist should be without this valuable series to enable him to trace the true origin of a place-name, instead of repeating some of the absurd derivations with which he is continually confronted.

Dwelly's Parish Records, Vol. IV. Wells Transcripts. By E. and T. W. DWELLY. 150 copies. 254 pp. 10s. net. (Herne Bay: E. DWELLY).

This is the third volume of Wells Transcripts published in this series; the first two volumes, compiled by Mr A. J. JEWERS, being those transcripts in a very fragile condition. The present undertaking is, however, more exhaustive, Mr DWELLY having commenced the herculean work of printing the whole of the Transcripts at Wells, its magnitude can be better estimated when it is pointed out that there are 469 parishes in Somerset, whereas only 10 can be included in the present volume.

It is to be hoped that Mr DWELLY will receive the support he deserves, and thus enable him to continue this valuable series.

Fleetwood Family Records, Parts II and III. By R. W. Buss. 4s. per part, post free. (Privately printed for the Editor, 8 Haysleigh Gardens, Anerley, London, S.E.)

These two parts are as interesting as the first, and the editor is to be congratulated upon his choice of material.

The second part contains a pedigree showing the Royal descent of FLEETWOOD of the Vache, Chalfont St Giles, co. Buckingham, which includes such interesting personages as the two regicides, General Charles, his cousin Colonel George FLEETWOOD, and General George FLEETWOOD, Baron of Sweden. There are some interesting notes relating to FLEETWOOD of Wood Street, Cheapside, with pedigrees; and extracts from family bibles, with a plate of the fly-leaf of that of Joseph FLEETWOOD.

Part III contains extracts from the registers in Dr WILLIAM's Library; abstracts of wills and Chancery proceedings; pedigree of FLEETWOOD of Wood Street, Cheapside; a biography of the notorious Charles FLEETWOOD, the Patentee of Drury Lane Theatre; extracts from the registers of the Reformed Dutch Church, New York; and a pedigree showing the Royal descent of FLEETWOOD of Calwich, co. Staffs, and Penwortham, co. Lancaster.

Mr Buss deserves the support of the Genealogical world, the interest being by no means confined to FLEETWOOD; it would be a pity if, for lack of a few subscribers, he was unable to continue the work.

Rhode Island Imprints, 1727-1800. Demy 8vo. 88 pp., numerous plates. (Rhode Island Historical Society.)

This most useful work gives a list of 1565 Rhode Island eighteenth century publications, showing what the printing press of the colony and State produced before 1801. It also gives a brief title of every book, pamphlet, newspaper, fly-sheet and broadside printed in the Island during the years indicated.

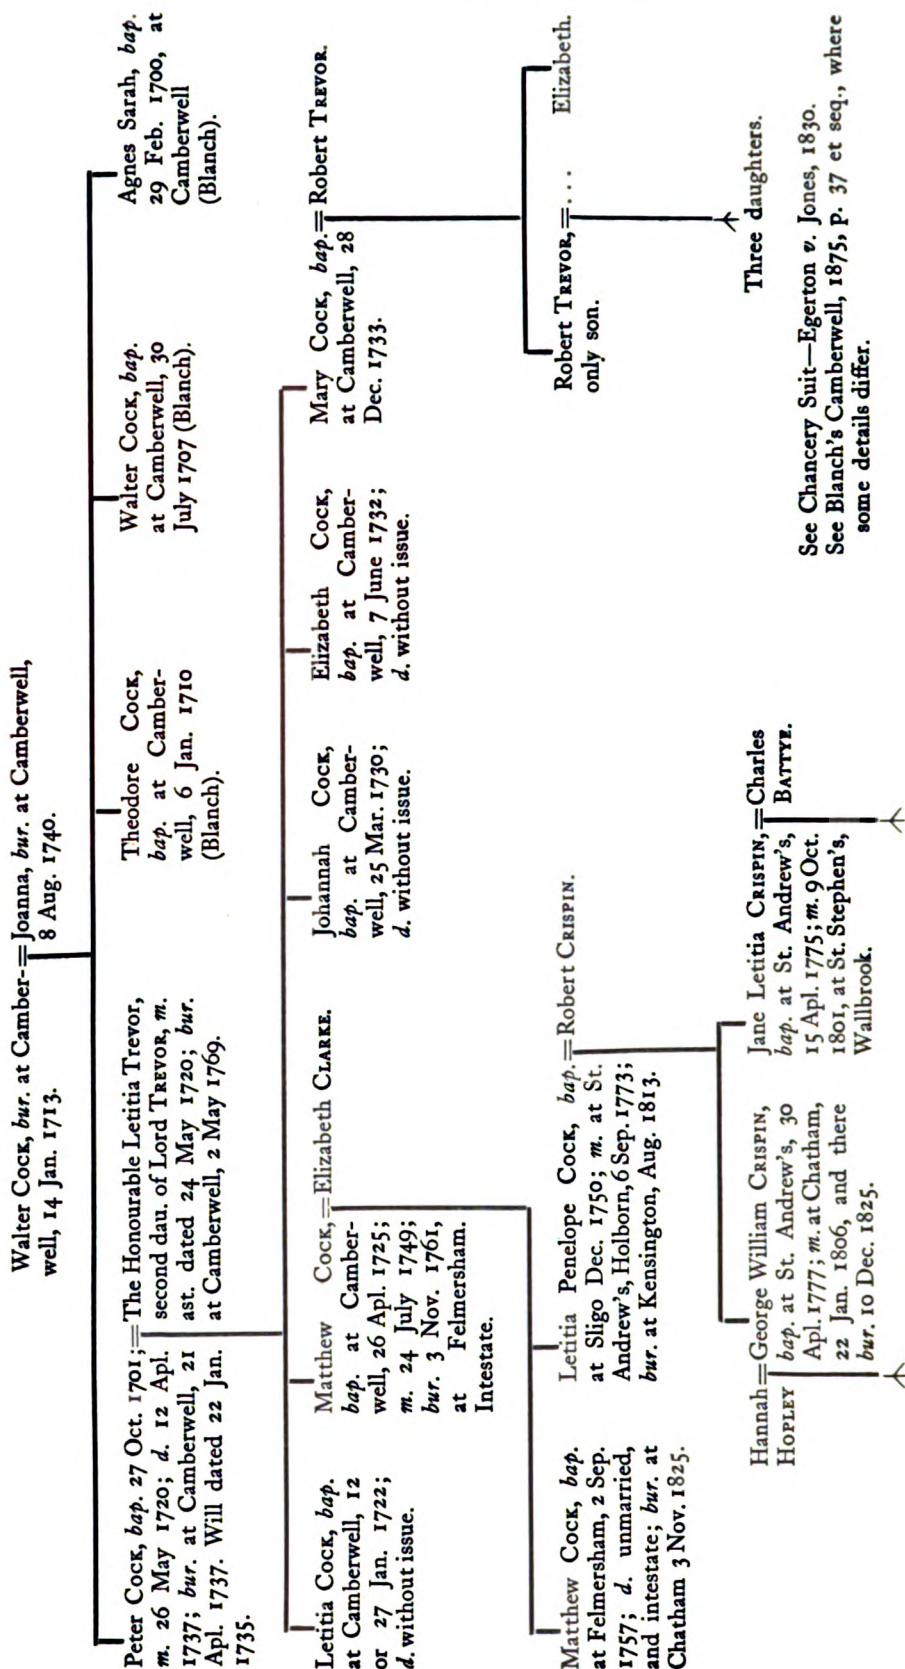

The list was compiled by the John Carter Brown Library with a view to discovering the material available for a history of printing in America.

There are numerous well-executed facsimiles of title pages of various publications.

The above-mentioned Library has negatives of nearly all extant copies of the Newport Mercury before 1776, and is prepared to supply copies of any of them at cost price to students or other libraries.

There is a good index.

THE BRITISH ARCHIVIST

Edited by RICHARD HOLWORTHY, F.S.G.

VOL. I, Nos. 21-22.

APRIL, 1920.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE

IN spite of the fact that the cost of printing and paper still remains very high, directly an opportunity presented itself for the issue of the present double number it was felt that it should be taken.

There appears to be little or no prospect of conditions improving, and it is therefore necessary to face the alternative either of ceasing publication altogether after the issue of Part XXIV., or of adding to the strength of the BRITISH ARCHIVIST by arranging for it to join forces with some other genealogical magazine.

There have been already too many genealogical publishing ventures which have lived for a brief space and then disappeared into oblivion. The BRITISH ARCHIVIST is too useful a publication to be allowed to "go under" in that way. It has, therefore, been arranged that after the issue of Parts XXIII. and XXIV. (for which our subscribers—or some of them (!)—have paid) this magazine will be amalgamated with Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica, a well-known genealogical quarterly, which has been published since 1868.

Messrs. Mitchell Hughes & Clarke, the publishers of Misc. Gen. et Her., have accepted responsibility for the early issue of Parts XXIII. and XXIV. of the BRITISH ARCHIVIST, and are arranging that its Supplements will be completed and other important genealogical work undertaken by the combined magazine, which will be under the joint editorship of Mr. Holworthy and Mr. A. W. Hughes Clarke.

It will be found that this arrangement will tend greatly to the advantage of our subscribers. As I have not the slightest financial interest in the new magazine resulting from the fusion, I have no hesitation in strongly recommending the BRITISH ARCHIVIST subscribers to give it their cordial support.

PEYTO OF CHESTERTON, CO. WARWICK

J. HARVEY BLOOM, M.A.

THE following abstracts of early documents preserved at Compton Verney, the seat of Lord WILLOUGHBY-DE-BROKE, are selected to illustrate and confirm an early Latin pedigree of PEYTO, which it is hoped may be printed in the next issue. It must be understood these are merely selections chosen on account of the facts contained in them, and not with the idea of a complete calendar. Drayton, the original home of the family, is with Dodwell, a small township in the parish of Old Stratford. Chesterton is many miles distant, but the Peyto lands were widely scattered in Warwickshire, at Sowe, Rugby, Little Alne, Burton Dassett, and elsewhere.

Temp. Hen. 3. Grant by Richard TRUSSEL to Richard DE PEYTOUH for homage & service, of a virgate of land in Draytoun which William son of Peter held, and half an acre in Doddewell bought of Henry DE BUNINTON, & the service of Simon son of Simon.

Witnesses. John DE WYLMKOTE of Ludintoun, John DE CURLY, Henry DE BUNINTON, Symon DE ALDEBUR' & others. 810
