Notes: 4. HUGUES [II] de Gournay (-[killed in battle Cardiff 1074]). The Chronique Manuscrite de Normandie records that, after the death of Canute King of England in 1035, "le Conte Neel de Coustantin...le sire de Guerarville, le sire de Gournay" sailed from Harfleur to England with Edward Prince of England to claim the English throne[888]. Guillaume de Poitou records that "Hugonis Gornacensis" joined forces with "Roberti Aucensis comitis", dated to after 1053[889]. "...Hugo de Gornai..." witnessed the charter dated to [1060] under which Guillaume II Duke of Normandy granted "Breneries" to the abbey of Bayeux[890]. The Chronique de Normandie, based on le Roman de Rou, names "Hue de Gournay sire de Bray" and "le Conte Hue de Gournay" among those who took part in the conquest of England in 1066, the two similar names suggesting that they were father and son[891]. [The Histoire et Chronique de Normandie, printed in 1610 at Rouen, records that "Hue de Gournay et le comte d'Evreux" died in Normandy from wounds received in battle at Cardiff in 1074, fighting an invasion led by "Canut [roi] de Norvège"[892]. The account must be garbled as there was no king named Canute in either Norway or Denmark at the time, nor has any record been found of a comte d'Evreux dying around that period. The historical basis of the account is uncertain.]

Gornai...Girard de Gornai..." witnessed the charter dated 1082 under which William I King of England donated property to the abbey of la Trinité de Caen[457].]

b) GERARD de Gournay (-Palestine after 1104). "Domino meo Hugone Gurnacensi et filio eius Girardo et uxore eius Basilia" consented to the donation by "Radulfus cognomine Havoth" to Jumièges by charter dated to [1040][458], although presumably the document is misdated. "Domino meo Hugone Gurnaiensi et filio eius Girardo et uxore eius Basilia" consented to a donation to Jumièges abbey by "Radulphus cognomina Havoth cum uxore mea" on his entering the abbey as a monk, by undated charter[459]. "...William de Gornai...Girard de Gornai..." witnessed the charter dated 1082 under which William I King of England donated property to the abbey of la Trinité de Caen[460]. "Odo comes et Stephanus filius eius"[461]. Orderic Vitalis records that "primus Normannorum Stephanus de Albamarla filius Odonis Campaniæ comitis" fortified "castellum suum super Aucium flumen" at the expense of William II King of England and placed there a garrison against "ducem" [Robert III Duke of Normandy] and that "Gornacensis Girardus" followed his example and delivered "Gornacum et Firmitatem et Goisleni Fontem" [Gournay, La Ferté-en-Brai, Gaillefontaine] to the king, dated to [1089/90][462]. Orderic Vitalis records that "comes Ebroicensis" requested Robert [III] Duke of Normandy to return "Bathventum et Nogionem, Vaceium et Craventionem, Scoceium [Bavent, near Troarn, Noyon-sur-Andelle, Gacé, Gravençon, Ecouché], aliosque fundos Radulfi patrui mei...Caput Asini" to him and grant "Pontem Sancti Petri" [Pont Saint-Pierre] to "nepoti...meo Guillelmo Bretoliensi", which the duke agreed to, except "Scoceium" which was held by "Girardus de Gornaco...qui de eadem parentela prodierat, filius...Basiliæ Girardi Fleitelli filia", dated to [1089][463].

He and his wife participated in the First Crusade but he died before the capture of Jerusalem[464]. Albert of Aix names "...Gerardus de Gorna..." among those who took part in the siege of Nikaia, dated to mid-1097 from the context[465]. Baudry names "Girardus de Gornaio" among those on the First Crusade in 1097[466]. Guillaume of Jumièges records that "Giraldus" left for Jerusalem but died while away[467]. Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the abbey of Bec, including donations by "Hugonis de Gornaco et Girardi filii...Girardi de Gornaio et Basilie matris sue", by charter dated to [1181/89][468]. [m firstly ---. As discussed below, one possibility for the parentage of Amicie, wife of Richard Talbot, is that she was the daughter of Gérard de Gournay by an earlier otherwise unrecorded marriage.]

m [secondly] ([1084/92]) as her first husband, EDIVE [Edith] de Warenne, daughter of WILLIAM [I] de Warenne Earl of Surrey & his first wife Gundred --- ([1072/80]-after 1155). Guillaume of Jumièges records that "Giraldus" left for Jerusalem "cum uxore sua Edithua sorore Willelmi comitis de Warena", who married secondly "Drogoni de Monceio", by whom she had "unum filium...Drogonem"[469]. Her birth date is indicated bearing in mind that she had children by both her marriages. The date of her first marriage is estimated assuming that she was about 12 years old at the time. She married secondly Dreux [I] Seigneur de Moncy. Her second marriage is confirmed by Orderic Vitalis who names "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco" and "Drogo, vitricus eius"[470]. Gérard & his [first/second] wife had [one child]:

i) [AMICIE de Gournay (before [1085]-[after 1100]). Her marriage and family connection are indicated by Orderic Vitalis who records that "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco" rebelled against King Henry I after the marriage of his sister Gundred in Jun [1118], and captured "municipium...Plessicii" which he granted to "nepoti eius Hugoni Talabot"[471]. The passage indicates that Hugh Talbot was at least a young adult at the time, so not born later than [1100], which would place his mother's birth no later than [1085]. There are therefore at least three possibilities for her parentage. Firstly, if she was the child of Gérard de Gournay by his known wife Edive de Warenne, Edive would have been born in the early part of her estimated birth date range shown above and Amicie born soon after the marriage. Secondly, given that that chronology is tight, Amicie could have been the daughter of Gérard by an earlier otherwise unrecorded marriage. Thirdly, the word "nepos" in Orderic could indicate a more distant family relationship than nephew, maybe first cousin, in which case Amicie could have been the daughter of Hugues [III] de Gournay, although the more remote the relationship the less likely the appointment of Richard Talbot as custodian of the castle by Hugues [IV] de Gournay. On balance, the most likely case appears to be the second. Her name is indicated by two charters of King Henry II: Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the abbey of Valmont, including donations by "...Richardi Tallebot et Amicie uxoris eius et Hugonis et Willelmi filiorum suorum...", by charter dated to [1181/83][472]. Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the priory of Sainte-Foi de Longueville, including donations by "Ricardi Thalebot et Avitie uxoris sue et Hugonis filii sui", by charter dated to [Mar/Jun] 1189[473]. m RICHARD Talbot, son of ---.] Gérard & his [second] wife had two children:

ii) HUGUES [IV] de Gournay ([1098/1100]-1180). Orderic Vitalis names "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco" and "Drogo vitricus eius"[474].

- see below.

iii) GUNDRED de Gournay ([1100/1105]-after 1155). Guillaume of Jumièges records that "Nigello de Albinneio" married "Gundredam filiam Giraldi de Gornaco" by whom he had "filium...Rogerium de Moubraio"[475]. Orderic Vitalis records the marriage in Jun [1118] of "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco...sorore sua...Gundrea...consilio regis" to "Nigello de Albinneio"[476]. In another passage she is named as second wife of Nigel d'Aubigny[477]. The 1130 Pipe Roll records "Gunderede uxori Nig de Albin" in Leicestershire[478]. "Gundreda, uxor Nigelli de Albin" donated property to the Hospital of St Leonard, York by undated charter which names "Rogerio de Molbray filio suo"[479]. An undated charter notes the donation of "Hospitale Sancti Michaelis Archangeli" to Whitby Monastery, at the request of "Dominam Gundredam uxorem Nigelli de Albin" for the soul of "Rogerio de Moubray filio eorum"[480]. m (Jun [1118]) as his second wife, NELE de Albin, son of ROGER de Albin & his wife Amice --- (-21 or 26 Nov 1129).

"Domino meo Hugone Gurnacensi et filio eius Girardo et uxore eius Basilia" consented to the donation by "Radulfus cognomine Havoth" to Jumièges by charter dated to [1040][89], although presumably the document is misdated. July 14

Jerusalem captured in First Crusade

During the First Crusade, Christian knights from Europe capture Jerusalem after seven weeks of siege and begin massacring the city's Muslim and Jewish population.

Beginning in the 11th century, Christians in Jerusalem were increasingly persecuted by the city's Islamic rulers, especially when control of the holy city passed from the relatively tolerant Egyptians to the Seljuk Turks in 1071. Late in the century, Byzantine Emperor Alexius Comenus, also threatened by the Seljuk Turks, appealed to the West for aid. In 1095, Pope Urban II publicly called for a crusade to aid Eastern Christians and recover the holy lands. The response by Western Europeans was immediate.

The first crusaders were actually undisciplined hordes of French and German peasants who met with little success. One group, known as the "People's Crusade," reached as far as Constantinople before being annihilated by the Turks. In 1096, the main crusading force, featuring some 4,000 mounted knights and 25,000 infantry, began to move east. Led by Raymond of Toulouse, Godfrey of Bouillon, Robert of Flanders, and Bohemond of Otranto, the army of Christian knights crossed into Asia Minor in 1097.

In June, the crusaders captured the Turkish-held city of Nicaea and then defeated a massive army of Seljuk Turks at Dorylaeum. From there, they marched on to Antioch, located on the Orontes River below Mount Silpius, and began a difficult six-month siege during which they repulsed several attacks by Turkish relief armies. Finally, early in the morning of June 3, 1098, Bohemond persuaded a Turkish traitor to open Antioch's Bridge Gate, and the knights poured into the city. In an orgy of killing, the Christians massacred thousands of enemy soldiers and citizens, and all but the city's fortified citadel was taken. Later in the month, a large Turkish army arrived to attempt to regain the city, but they too were defeated, and the Antioch citadel surrendered to the Europeans.

After resting and reorganizing for six months, the crusaders set off for their ultimate goal, Jerusalem. Their numbers were now reduced to some 1,200 cavalry and 12,000 foot soldiers. On June 7, 1099, the Christian army reached the holy city, and finding it heavily fortified, began building three enormous siege towers. By the night of July 13, the towers were complete, and the Christians began fighting their way across Jerusalem's walls. On July 14, Godfrey's men were the first to penetrate the defenses, and the Gate of Saint Stephen was opened. The rest of the knights and soldiers then poured in, the city was captured, and tens of thousands of its occupants were slaughtered.

The crusaders had achieved their aims, and Jerusalem was in Christian hands, but an Egyptian army marched on the holy city a few weeks later to challenge their claim. The Egyptians' defeat by the outnumbered Christians in August ended Muslim resistance to the Europeans for the time being, and five small Christian states were set up in the region under the rule of the leaders of the crusade.

"Domino meo Hugone Gurnacensi et filio eius Girardo et uxore eius Basilia" consented to the donation by "Radulfus cognomine Havoth" to Jumièges by charter dated to [1040][875], although presumably the document is misdated. "Domino meo Hugone Gurnaiensi et filio eius Girardo et uxore eius Basilia" consented to a donation to Jumièges abbey by "Radulphus cognomina Havoth cum uxore mea" on his entering the abbey as a monk, by undated charter[876]. "...William de Gornai...Girard de Gornai..." witnessed the charter dated 1082 under which William I King of England donated property to the abbey of la Trinité de Caen[877]. "Odo comes et Stephanus filius eius"[878]. Orderic Vitalis records that "primus Normannorum Stephanus de Albamarla filius Odonis Campaniæ comitis" fortified "castellum suum super Aucium flumen" at the expense of William II King of England and placed there a garrison against "ducem" [Robert III Duke of Normandy] and that "Gornacensis Girardus" followed his example and delivered "Gornacum et Firmitatem et Goisleni Fontem" [Gournay, La Ferté-en-Brai, Gailfontaine] to the king, dated to [1089/90][879]. Orderic Vitalis records that "comes Ebrouensis" requested Robert [III] Duke of Normandy to return "Bathventum et Nogionem, Vaceium et Craventionem, Scoceium [Bavent,

He and his wife participated in the First Crusade but he died before the capture of Jerusalem[881]. Albert of Aix names "...Gerardus de Gorna..." among those who took part in the siege of Nikaia, dated to mid-1097 from the context[882]. Baudry names "Girardus de Gornaio" among those on the First Crusade in 1097[883]. Guillaume of Jumièges records that "Giraldus" left for Jerusalem but died while away[884].

Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the abbey of Bec, including donations by "Hugonis de Gornaco et Girardi filii...Girardi de Gornaio et Basilie matris sue", by charter dated to [1181/89][885]. This donation is by Gerard de Gournay ad Basilie, the parents of Gerard de Gournay.

[m firstly ---. As discussed below, one possibility for the parentage of Amicie, wife of Richard Talbot, is that she was the daughter of Gérard de Gournay by an earlier otherwise unrecorded marriage.] m [secondly] ([1084/92]) as her first husband, EDIVE [Edith] de Warrenne, daughter of WILLIAM [I] de Warrenne Earl of Surrey & his first wife Gundred --- ([1072/80]-after 1155). Guillaume of Jumièges records that "Giraldus" left for Jerusalem "cum uxore sua Edithua sorore Willelmi comitis de Warennia", who married secondly "Drogoni de Monceio", by whom she had "unum filium...Drogonem"[886]. Her birth date is indicated bearing in mind that she had children by both her marriages. The date of her first marriage is estimated assuming that she was about 12 years old at the time. She married secondly Dreux [I] Seigneur de Moncy. Her second marriage is confirmed by Orderic Vitalis who names "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco" and "Drogo, vitricus eius"[887]. Gérard & his [first/second] wife had [one child]:

i) [AMICIE de Gournay (before [1085]-[after 1100]). Her marriage and family connection are indicated by Orderic Vitalis who records that "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco" rebelled against King Henry I after the marriage of his sister Gundred in Jun [1118], and captured "municipium...Plessicii" which he granted to "nepoti eius Hugoni Talabot"[888]. The passage indicates that Hugh Talbot was at least a young adult at the time, so not born later than [1100], which would place his mother's birth no later than [1085]. There are therefore at least three possibilities for her parentage. Firstly, if she was the child of Gérard de Gournay by his known wife Edive de Warrenne, Edive would have been born in the early part of her estimated birth date range shown above and Amicie born soon after the marriage. Secondly, given that that chronology is tight, Amicie could have been the daughter of Gérard by an earlier otherwise unrecorded marriage. Thirdly, the word "nepos" in Orderic could indicate a more distant family relationship than nephew, maybe first cousin, in which case Amicie could have been the daughter of Hugues [III] de Gournay, although the more remote the relationship the less likely the appointment of Richard Talbot as custodian of the castle by Hugues [IV] de Gournay. On balance, the most likely case appears to be the second. Her name is indicated by two charters of King Henry II: Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the abbey of Valmont, including donations by "...Richardi Tallebot et Amicie uxoris eius et Hugonis et Willelmi filiorum suorum...", by charter dated to [1181/83][889]. Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the priory of Sainte-Foi de Longueville, including donations by "Ricardi Thalebot et Avitie uxoris sue et Hugonis filii sui", by charter dated to [Mar/Jun] 1189[890]. m RICHARD Talbot, son of ---.]

Gérard & his [second] wife had two children:

ii) HUGUES [IV] de Gournay ([1098/1100]-1180). Orderic Vitalis names "Hugo

filius Girardi de Gornaco" and "Drogo vitricus eius"[891].

- see below.

iii) GUNDRED de Gournay ([1100/1105]-after 1155). Guillaume of Jumièges records that "Nigello de Albinneio" married "Gundredam filiam Giraldi de Gornaco" by whom he had "filium...Rogerium de Moubraio"[892]. Orderic Vitalis records the marriage in Jun [1118] of "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco...sorore sua...Gundrea...consilio regis" to "Nigello de Albinneio"[893]. In another passage she is named as second wife of Nigel d'Aubigny[894]. The 1130 Pipe Roll records "Gunderede uxori Nig de Albin" in Leicestershire[895]. "Gundreda, uxor Nigelli de Albini" donated property to the Hospital of St Leonard, York by undated charter which names "Rogerio de Molbray filio suo"[896]. An undated charter notes the donation of "Hospitale Sancti Michaelis Archangeli" to Whitby Monastery, at the request of "Dominam Gundredam uxorem Nigelli de Albini" for the soul of "Rogerio de Moubray filio eorum"[897]. m (Jun [1118]) as his second wife, NELE de Albini, son of ROGER de Albini & his wife Amice --- (-21 or 26 Nov 1129).

Gérard de Gournay-en-Bray (LBGV-H99) (1043–1104): Notes

My 26th Great Grandfather

Title: Notes and sources from Life sketch-

Note: Gurney Rec. of the House of Gournay (i): 286-289, 292-293, 776-777 [author alleges that Gerard de Gournay and his wife, Ediva, had a younger son, Walter de Gournay (living 1150), ancestor of the Gurnay family of Norfolk. Such an individual existed but he had no association in the records with the senior branch of the Gournay family. Rather, it appears that Walter was closely related to a Galiena de Gournay, born say 1120, living c. 1170, wife of Manasser de Dammartin (died 1178/9), of Mendlesham and Cotton, Suffolk, Norton Mandeville, Essex, etc. Surviving records show that Manasser de Dammartin enfeoffed Walter de Gumay with a 1/4 knight's fee in Suffolk during the Civil War between King Stephen and Empress Maud. In 1150 Walter de Gournay witnessed a charter to Missenden Abbey for Manasser and Galiena. Charter evidence proves that Galiena was the granddaughter of an unplaced William de Gumay, of Addington, Kent, whose gift to the see of Rochester she confirmed by her own undated charter. Given these facts, it is doubtful that Walter de Gournay was the son of Gerard de Gournay as alleged [see Hasted 4 (1798): 544-545; Copinger Manors of Suffolk 3 (1909): 277-278; Lewis C. i) ADELISE de Beaumont ([before 1045]-Rouen 11 Jul 1091, bur Saint-Evroul). Orderic Vitalis records that "Hugo de Grentemaisnilio" married "Adelidem filiam Ivonis comitis de Bellomonte"[38]. Her birth date is estimated based on the estimated birth date of her oldest known son. She owned Peatling Magna, in the possession of Leofric in 1086 in Domesday Book[39]. Orderic Vitalis records the death "Rotomagi V Id Jul" of "Adeliza...Ivonis de Bellomonte comitis, de Judæa genetrix, filia", wife of Hugues de Grantmesnil, seven years before her husband died and her burial at Ouche, adding that she and her husband has six sons and six daughters[40]. m ([before 1060][41]) HUGUES de Grantmesnil, son of ROBERT de Grantmesnil & his wife Hawise --- (-in England 22 Feb 1098, bur Saint-Evroul).

"Ivo comes de Bellomonte et Adelhidis uxor eius" donated "ecclesia Sanctæ Honorinæ de Confluentio" to the monastery of Bec by charter dated 1080[30]. The Chronicon Beccensis Abbatiae records that "Yvo de Bellomonte comes uxor Isarum et Adelidis uxor eius" donated "ecclesia B. Honorinæ de Confluentium" to Bec in 1082[31]. [Depoin says that Adelais "devait appartenir à la maison de Gournay", citing the necrology of Beaumont-Saint-Léonor which records the death of Hugues de Gournay ("X Kal Nov...Hugo de Gornayo"[32]) and suggesting that Hugues, younger brother of Mathieu [I] Comte de Beaumont, was named after him[33]. However, there is no indication to which Hugues de Gournay this necrology entry relates, nor of the time when he lived. The idea is interesting, but the data on which the hypothesis rests is too imprecise to suggest that it is probable.]

The Necrologium Bellimontense records the death "VI Id Apr" of "Adeledis comitissa Bellimontis"[34]. The year of her death is ascertained as follows. Depoin records that "la plus ancienne vie de saint Gautier, premier abbé de Saint-Martin de Pontoise" (he provides no precise citation reference for this source) records his death "le vendredi saint, et le même jour fut le dernier de la comtesse"[35]. The necrology of Pontoise Saint-Martin records the death "VI Id Apr" of "apud castrum Pontisariense...Sancti Galteri abbatis"[36], which coincides with the date of death of Adelais reported in the Necrologium Bellimontense. According to the calculations of Cheney, the only years in the mid- to late 11th and early 12th centuries when Good Friday fell on 8 April were 1037, 1099 and 1110[37]. Of these, the second appears to be the only year which is possible from a chronological point of view.

 i) [AMICIE de Gournay (before [1085]-[after 1100]). Her marriage and family connection are indicated by Orderic Vitalis who records that "Hugo filius Girardi de Gornaco" rebelled against King Henry I after the marriage of his sister Gundred in Jun [1118], and captured "municipium...Plessicii" which he granted to "nepoti eius Hugoni Talabot"[919]. The passage indicates that Hugh Talbot was at least a young adult at the time, so not born later than [1100], which would place his mother's birth no later than [1085]. There are therefore at least three possibilities for her parentage. Firstly, if she was the child of Gérard de Gournay by his known wife Edive de Warrenne, Edive would have been born in the early part of her estimated birth date range shown above and Amicie born soon after the marriage. Secondly, given that that chronology is tight, Amicie could have been the daughter of Gérard by an earlier otherwise unrecorded marriage. Thirdly, the word "nepos" in Orderic could indicate a more distant family relationship than nephew, maybe first cousin, in which case Amicie could have been the daughter of Hugues [III] de Gournay, although the more remote the relationship the less likely the appointment of Richard Talbot as custodian of the castle by Hugues [IV] de Gournay. On balance, the most likely case appears to be the second. Her name is indicated by two charters of King Henry II: Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the abbey of Valmont, including donations by "...Richardi Tallebot et Amicie uxoris eius et Hugonis et Willelmi filiorum suorum...", by charter dated to [1181/83][920]. Henry II King of England confirmed the possessions of the priory of Sainte-Foi de Longueville, including donations by "Ricardi Thalebot et Avitie uxoris sue et Hugonis filii sui", by charter dated to [Mar/Jun] 1189[921]. m RICHARD Talbot, son of ---.]
