Notes: 2. RENAUD . Seigneur de Gournay. m ALBERADE, daughter of ---. Gauthier de la Ferté founded the priory of La Ferté en Brai, at the command of "fratre Hugone", by charter dated to [989/96], which names his father Renaud and his mother Alberade[883]. Renaud & his wife had two children:

a) HUGUES [I] de Gournay (-after 989). Gauthier de la Ferté founded the priory of La Ferté en Brai, at the command of "fratre Hugone", by charter dated to [989/96], which names his father Renaud and his mother Alberade[884]. The "command" of his brother suggests that Hugues was the older son, and presumably also Seigneur de Gournay.

b) GAUTHIER de la Ferté (-after 989). Gauthier de la Ferté founded the priory of La Ferté en Brai, at the command of "fratre Hugone", by charter dated to [989/96], which names his father Renaud and his mother Alberade[885].

Notes: 4. HUGUES [II] de Gournay (-[killed in battle Cardiff 1074]). The Chronique Manuscrite de Normandie records that, after the death of Canute King of England in 1035, "le Conte Neel de Coustantin...le sire de Guerarville, le sire de Gournay" sailed from Harfleur to England with Edward Prince of England to claim the English throne[888]. Guillaume de Poitou records that "Hugonis Gornacensis" joined forces with "Roberti Aucensis comitis", dated to after 1053[889]. "...Hugo de Gornai..." witnessed the charter dated to [1060] under which Guillaume II Duke of Normandy granted "Brenérias" to the abbey of Bayeux[890]. The Chronique de Normandie, based on le Roman de Rou, names "Hue de Gournay sire de Bray" and "le Conte Hue de Gournay" among those who took part in the conquest of England in 1066, the two similar names suggesting that they were father and son[891]. [The Histoire et Chronique de Normandie, printed in 1610 at Rouen, records that "Hue de Gournay et le comte d'Evreux" died in Normandy from wounds received in battle at Cardiff in 1074, fighting an invasion led by "Canut [roi] de Norvège"[892]. The account must be garbled as there was no king named Canute in either Norway or Denmark at the time, nor has any record been found of a comte d'Evreux dying around that period. The historical basis of the account is uncertain.]

Title: There is no evidence that Gauthier de la Ferté married Isabelle de Ponthieu
In Racines Histoire there is no mention of anybody named Isabell de Ponthieu; There is an Elizabeth de Ponthieu born to Guillaume I, Comte de Ponthieu et Montreuil, but she became an abbess at St Austreberthe, Montreuil and never married.
